NEW RUNWAY A proposed new "crosswind runway" is shown to the right of the existing Gnoss Field runway in this planner's map included in the proposed Gnoss Field Master Plan. The new runway, which would be built sometime after 1983, would help accomodate the 655 planes planned for the airfield by 1992. The new runway would also eliminate landing hazards caused by afternoon winds.

Toll Boost Backed By Transit Board

Raise To 75 Cents Endorsed

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Marin County Transit District directors today reversed themselves and unconditionally endorsed a 50 per cent toll hike on the Golden Gate Bridge.

The directors had voted unanimously in May to support the increase from 50 to 75 cents for a round-trip toll only after more buses or ferries are added by the bridge district.

Supervisors Michael Wornum, who also serves on the bridge board, argued operating deficits are too large for the existing transit system to permit its expansion until tolls are hiked.

His motion to endorse the increase was approved 6-1, with Supervisor Robert A. Romiguiere the lone dissenter. He objected the extra $4 million a year from the hike "will simply fatten the doffers of the bridge district," and that the transit system still was not efficient enough.

Marin commuters who drive to work will pay the "drastic increase," and will not shift to transit, he insisted. "This'll just tap the poor fellow who has to drive to work," Roumiguiere declared.

Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste, noting he commutes by car, rebutted the increase is "a reasonable one."

Wornum pressed Roumiguiere for some other way to prevent the bridge district from going broke, but Roumiguiere replied that while he had "some other suggestions, I am not going into them now."

Today's vote did not change the board's previous opposition to any increase in transit fares. This same position has been endorsed in committee by bridge directors.

The bridge staff has proposed the toll hike be effective on Jan. 1.

The proposal will be considered by the bridge district's joint finance-auditing and transportation committee at 9:30 a.m. on Thursday in toll plaza offices. The finance-auditing committee recommended the increase last spring, but it never came to a vote by the full board because of opposition by San Francisco supervisors. Several supervisors now say they favor some sort of toll increase.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. urged the bridge district to leave the toll at 50 cents for car pools, but this was not part of Wornum's motion. Arrigoni said he would favor "maybe even a $1 toll" for cars carrying only the driver.

"Collection points" along main routes for commuters to form car pools by hitching rides were suggested by Supervisor Gary T. Giacomini.

FAREWELL TO THE FAIR

Four-year-old Brian McNeil of Corte Madera appears entranced by the sweet smell of fair flowers that fill a buggy pulled by his mother, one of many residents who today purchased flora that was displayed at the 1973 Marin County Fair. Yesterday's closing-day, Labor Day crowd of 13,000 brought the fair's five-day total gate to 64,391 persons, down from last year's 67,752 record attendance.

$7.3 Million Improvement Of Gnoss Field Suggested

By ERIK M. INGRAM

A proposed long-range master plan for Gnoss Field north of Novato recommends expansion of the existing runway and construction of a new "crosswind runway" to accommodate some 655 planes by 1992.

The new master plan, just submitted to the county by the consulting firm of Wilsey and Ham, envisions $7.3 million worth of improvements during the next 20 years.

The plan says about $5.3 million can come from the federal government and the remaining $2 million will have to be raised from local sources such as the county's general fund or a special bond issue.

A large chunk of the funds would be pumped into the "crosswind runway" and related facilities such as hangars, aprons, auto and aircraft parking, taxiways and facilities for another private aviation firm.

Aviation enthusiasts maintain such a runway is vital at the county airport to eliminate hazards in landing during the afternoon.

Gnoss Field, first developed as a sod runway strip in 1946, was purchased by the county in 1965. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been pumped into improvements since.

With the construction of the existing runway in 1968, controversy arose over crosswinds which make afternoon landings hazardous. Currently, about 130 planes are based at the airport.

The master plan notes that between 1968 and 1972 there were 35 accidents, of which 25 per cent have been blamed on strong crosswinds.

The plan, which will be submitted to the county aviation commission, planning commission and board of supervisors for approval, does not include plans for large-scale cargo or passenger service.

"There will be, however, some passenger movement by aircraft charter and taxi activity related to the fixed base operators, passengers carried in personal and business aircraft and some company cargo of a minor degree moved in orporate aircraft," it says.

The multi-million dollar expansion, which would require acquisition of 220 acres of nearby land, would be phased over three periods.

The first period, from 1973 to 1977, would add new support facilities to the existing runway. Those would include a new administration building, traffic control tower, parking apron, internal roadways, floodlights and holding aprons. Cost is estimated at $1.5 million.

The second period, from 1978 to 1982, calls for another 200 feet to be added to the existing 3,300-foot runway, new T-hangars, taxiways, facilities for another private aviation firm (currently there are two firms), a helipad, acquisition of 58 acres for runway expansion and related costs. The total would be about $2.8 million.

The third period, from 1983 to 1992, includes construction of the new crosswind runway and related facilities at a cost of about $3 million.

The new runway, when complete, would form an open-ended V with the existing runway, the point hitting the southern boundary of the airport property. About 162 acres to the east of the airport will be acquired.

Cost of preparing the proposed master plan was about $22,000, two-thirds of which was paid by the Federal Aviation Administration and one-third by the county.

The county aviation commission, meeting tonight at 8 o'clock at Civic Center, is expected to receive copies of the plan for review, after which public hearings will be held.

Nixon Plans No Agnew Case Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon looks to Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson "to handle this matter" involving federal criminal allegations against Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and feels strongly that the matter should not be discussed from the White House, a spokesman said today.

In making the statement, Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren sidestepped questions by reporters on whether Nixon would be consulted by Richardson before the attorney general decides on whether federal prosecutors in Baltimore should present evidence to a grand jury.

"The President looks to the attorney general to handle this matter and that's where it stands," said Warren.

Warren added that the President told him during a chat this morning that he "feels it would be very inappropriate for me to discuss this matter."

Warren was asked if Nixon has "full confidence" in Richardson and Watergate Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox. He replied:

"The President has of course full confidence in the attorney general and in so placing (Richardson in the job), gave the attorney general the responsibility and job of choosing the special prosecutor."

Richardson returned to his office today from a vacation to face the decision whether to allow kickback allegations against Agnew, based chiefly on the period in the 1960s when he was Baltimore County executive then Maryland governor, to go to a federal grand jury.

Justice Department spokesmen provided no guidance on when Richardson would make the decision, nor whether it would be disclosed publicly or passed on quietly to the prosecutors.

U.S. Attorney George Beall continued preparation in Baltimore of evidence about Maryland political corruption. It was believed that Beall's staff would not meet immediately with the grand jury, which has been in recess since Aug. 22.

Richardson spent Labor Day weekend in his home state of Massachusetts. A spokesman said today, "Everything in the Agnew case is exactly as it was when Mr. Richardson left on vacation last week. There are no new decisions from our office despite what you hear."

Agnew's office yesterday branded as "absolutely false" a Newsweek magazine report that his staff had been informed that a federal grand jury in Baltimore will hear evidence this week involving Agnew in an investigation of alleged kickbacks by Maryland contractors.

The grand jury hasn't met since Aug. 23 when it returned a 39-count indictment against N. Dale Anderson, Agnew's Democratic successor as Baltimore County executive, on charges of bribery, conspiracy and extortion involving eight contractors doing business with the county.

President Nixon expressed full confidence in Agnew's integrity at his Aug. 22 press conference and Agnew himself called the allegations "a damned lie."

The vice president spent the Labor Day weekend on Maryland's eastern shore with his family. He played golf yesterday.

Nixon and Agnew met for two hours Satkday at the White House giving rise to speculation that there was an imminent development in the Agnew case. Aides for both men said Agnew simply brought the President up to date on his legal situation.

Some Bus Commuters To Get Relief; 10 Shelters Planned

Marin bus commuters, after braving two winters of waiting in the wet, will get some shelters by late December.

With some 600 bus stops throughout the county, however, the initial program to build 10 temporary shelters was termed only a beginning by transit district directors.

The board's unanimous vote to start the shelter program was spurred by two years of frustration while waiting for federal money for permanent shelters.

Gen. Mgr. Ray W. Foreaker Jr. announced the government has approved a $100,000 grant for the shelters, but predicted there was "no chance" the money could come in time for any shelters to be built until after the rainy season.

Foreaker issued a detailed report on the temporary shelters, but recommended against the $20,000 expenditure because most of it probably will have to come out of the $98,000 reserve left this fiscal year. About $5,000 could come out of road funds, he said.

He added that the Golden Gate Bridge District staff was "rather upset" at the prospect of the county going ahead with temporary shelters because they will have to be moved to other stops when permanent shelters are built.

Foreaker stressed that none of the $20,000 would come from the $50,000 the county got in sales tax revenue from delivery of bridge district buses. This was the carrot the bridge district used to attract the $100,000 grant.

He said it was unknown how many shelters the bridge district will be able to build for

Challenges Mark Start Of Cotati Recall Voting

The bitterness of Cotati's recall campaign intensified today as voting got off to a heavy start and some young voters were being challenged.

Persons promoting the recall of Councilmen Geoffrey Dunham, Annette Lombardi and Stephen Laughlin filed advance challenges on credentials of 300 prospective voters. The challenges — mainly against young voters —require persons to provide identification to prove their legal addresses.

Recall backers scanned the voter registration list at the Sonoma County Elections Department and questioned whether some Sonoma State College students actually maintain legal residence in Cotati. Older residents had threatened to make the challenges, charging that some voters listed illegal residences in the election in April of 1972 when the three young people ousted incumbent

Nixon Attends Swearing In Of Colby As New Director Of CIA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon witnessed the swearing in today of William E. Colby as new director of the Central Intelligence Agency and called him "a true professional in that sense of the word."

After the oath taking ceremony in the Oval Office, Nixon turned to Colby and quipped: "Whenever you can ... if CIA can tell me before I read it in the newspapers..," his voice trailing off amidst laughter of guests.

The guests included Secretary of State designate Henry A. Kissinger, Defense Secretary James Schlesinger and Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Lt. Gen. Vernon Walters, deputy director of the CIA, was invited to the ceremony but was out of the country.

Walters' memos regarding conversations with former acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray disclosed White House-related attempts to involve the CIA in the Watergate cover-up in 1972.

Colby's wife, dressed in a bright pink suit, held a new Bible presented to her by Nixon, as her husband was sworn in by U. S. District Judge George L. Hart Jr.

State's Holiday Death Toll 48

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Forty-eight persons were killed in traffic accidents in California over the Labor Day holiday, the highway patrol reported today.

The same number were killed last year over the period, which extends from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday.

The highway patrol made 1,980 arrests for drunken driving over the holiday, a spokesman said.

Nixon's Lawyers To File Appeal On Tape Ruling

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The White House said today President Nixon's lawyers will file a written appeal Thursday to a court order that he turn over his Watergate tapes to a federal judge.

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica ruled last week that Nixon must submit the tape recordings to him so he could review them privately before deciding if they should be turned over to special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren told reporters that Nixon's lawyers, J. Fred Buzhardt and Charles Alan Wright, had decided on the form of their appeal, but Warren declined to elaborate.

DUMPS CHEMICALS — A helicopter crewman dumps a bag of fire fighting chemical on the grounded ship Key Largo in the Mississippi River about 50 miles south of New Orleans. The vessel was given up as a loss early today when crews discovered that a poisonous chemical had never been loaded aboard the ship. (UPI Telephoto)

Burning Freighter Given Up As A Complete Loss

PHOENIX, La. (UPI) — Coast Guard firefighting crews gave up as a loss early today the burning freighter Key Largo after discovering a poisonous chemical had never been loaded.

The hulk of the freighter burned through the night. A spokesman for the Coast Guard station in New Orleans said the ship's "superstructure has melted and burned and there are breaches in the hull."

The Coast Guard cutter Achushnet remained alongside the Key Largo through the night.

The fire broke out Sunday and the ship's crew said they had it under control. But late Sunday the fire worsened and the crew ran the ship aground south of New Orleans at the mouth of the Mississippi River and abandoned it.

Coast Guard spokesmen said the ship contained tons of tetraethyl lead that, when burned, produced a fume that could eat human flesh. The ship also contained calcium carbide, which the Coast Guard said exploded when mixed with water.

Officials ordered the evacuation of small towns within a mile of the freighter, but the 500 residents returned to their homes late yesterday when the Coast Guard said the poisonous chemical was not aboard the boat and the calcium carbide was not as explosive as they had thought.

"We feel at least that the urgency of it (the fire situation) has changed," said Bill Rice, Coast Guard spokesman.

The tetraethyl lead was left sitting in barrels on a wharf in New Orleans. The ship's crew thought it was aboard and told the Coast Guard it was. The truth was revealed by Harry Henners of Ethyl Corp., owners of the chemical.

The explosion threat from the calcium carbide existed, but was not too serious, a spokesman said.

Texas Coast Gears For Tropical Storm

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — Daredevil surfers took advantage yesterday of the high waves whipped up in advance of tropical storm Delia, but the Labor Day vacationers and coastal residents fled the beachfronts today as Delia bore down on the Texas Coast.

The swirling storm approached with such speed weather experts predicted it would never reach hurricane force.

Delia, one of two tropical storms menacing the hemisphere, carried winds of 50 to 65 miles per hour at 12:30 a.m. today. The storm was 145 miles southeast of Galveston and moving toward a spot between Galveston and Freeport at 15 to 18 miles an hour.

The high tides sprayed over seawalls and flooded roads leading out of Sabine Pass on the Louisiana border. The city's population of 850 was evacuated last night.

Residents living in beachfront homes in the Freeport area 42 miles due south of Houston, were evacuated early today and the bridge across the Intercoastal Canal connecting the beaches to the mainland was closed.

Meanwhile, tropical storm Christine churned northeastward toward an archipelago separating the Atlantic Ocean from the Caribbean. But the storm, which once packed winds of 60 miles an hour, was steadily losing strength and was reclassified today as a tropical depression.

The island of Antigua braced for a full-fledged hurricane even though Christine packed winds of only 35 miles an hour. The Antiqua government opened schools and churches as refuge centers and warned residents along the coast to flee their homes. Police leaves were canceled and the 50-man Antiqua defense force was mobilized.

But gusts of gale force winds and heavy thundershowers could cause local flooding. These conditions were expected to hit the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico today and tonight.

Weather spokesmen said Christine could intensify again back to tropical storm status.

Delia's arms stretched to the coast yesterday and whipped waves up to eight feet high. They attracted only the most expert surfers.

"It was real big, better than usual," said George Fress, 20, munching on a giant hamburger just off the beach at Galveston. "It was great, really big waves out there today."

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Allende Rally

SANTIAGO (UPI) — Chile's largest labor organization called a giant rally today to demonstrate popular support for President Salvador Allende, faced with crippling strikes by other labor factions and serious political opposition.

The rally was called by the Central Worker's Federation, a union combine of more than a million members equivalent in structure to the AFL-CIO in the United States. The Communist-controlled federation called the rally to celebrate the third anniversary of the election that brought Allende to power.

Allende planned to address the crowd from a balcony of the presidential palace, La Moneda.

Actor's Death

HONG KONG (UPI) — A doctor testified today that Bruce Lee, the Chinese-American movie star, apparently died July 22 from some form of brain disease.

The special inquiry into the death of the 32-year-old actor, who made a series of successful films based on the ancient Chinese art of Kung-fu, later adjourned until Sept. 17 after two days of hearings.

Coroner C. K. E. Tung, in opening the inquest yesterday, said the government pathologist found that Lee suffered a swelling of the brain, congestion of the organs and that traces of marijuana were found in his lungs.

Strike Ends

OTTAWA (UPI) — The only railway union defying the Canadian government's emergency back-to-work law gave in and ordered its workers to return to their jobs today — but union leaders said their members were "bitter" about it.

However, some factions of the hold-out union in western Canada vowed to defy not only the government order but the union leadership as well and remain off the job.

Most trains were running normally over much of Canada, but major lines said restoration of full coast-to-coast passenger service would be delayed at least until the end of the week.

Irish Trouble

BELFAST (UPI) — British army intelligence sources said today it is "only a matter of time" before rival factions of the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) turn their guns on each other.

The feud, they said, has turned the IRA into the army's best informer.

IRA sources said that the militant Provisional wing of the organization and the more moderate official wing held fence-mending meetings over the weekend and arranged a truce to end their recent spat.

But army intelligence sources today predicted the truce won't last long.

Shellfish Ban

ROME (UPI) — The Health Ministry ordered a nationwide ban on shellfish today in an effort to curb Italy's cholera epidemic.

The order forbade importing, gathering, transporting, selling or supplying of edible mollusks until further notice.

The ministry announcement reiterated that cholera-infested mussels touched off the outbreak that has claimed 14 lives in eight days, all but one in southern Italy in the Naples and Bari areas.

Vietnam Jailing

SAIGON (UPI) — Two South Vietnamese labor leaders and six other persons were sentenced to prison yesterday in connection with alleged Communist infiltration of South Vietnam's labor movement.

All of the eight, including two women, drew jail terms ranging from 18 months to 11 years for the alleged crimes, but one woman, Pham Thi Hong Diem, had her two-year sentence commuted and was placed on probation.

A third labor leader, Pham Van Hy, said by the government to have been the leader of the plot and an underground Communist leader since 1948, hanged himself in his prison cell April 21 shortly after his arrest, the government said.

Besieged City

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — The Cambodian command said today government troops broke a rebel hold on the road linking embattled Kompong Cham to its airport but failed in a bloody drive to reopen Phnom Penh's sole highway to the sea.

A command communique said Kompong Cham's besieged defenders — aided by reinforcements, new ammunition and fresh weapons brought in by river convoy — recaptured the vital road between Kompong Cham and its isolated air strip.

The road is the principal link between the surrounded city 50 miles northwest of Phnom Penh and the outside world.

Command spokesman Col. Am Rong told reporters yesterday rebel soldiers had cut the road earlier in the day. But today's communique said: "The road connecting the city and the airport is still held by our troops."

Iceland Warned On Fishing War

LONDON (UPI) —Britain warned Iceland against escalating the cod fishing war between the two countries today and renewed its offer for new negotiations, a Foreign Office spokesman said.

He said John Mackenzie, British ambassador in Reykjavik, handed a note to the Icelandic Foreign Office today outlining Britain's position.

The spokesman said the note contained Britain's account of a recent incident between a British warship and an Icelandic gun boat that led to the death of one Icelandic crewman while making repairs on the gunboat.

World Talks on Money System Set

PARIS (UPI) —Financial experts from 20 leading western nations arrived in Pairs today for talks on restructuring the world money system.

Sources at the conference said the experts were optimistic of their chances of success because of the recent stabilization of the American dollar on international money markets and because of reports in financial quarters that leading nations were in tacit agreement to end their quarrels over money issues during the conference.

Beginning tomorrow, the Group of 20, known as G-20, will try to hammer out a new system of foreign trade payments to replace the Bretton Woods accord signed just after World War II. That agreement was nullified by President Nixon in August, 1971 when Nixon declared the dollar could no longer be converted to gold.

The G-20 will meet for three days on the deputy level to try to work out the new agreement. The meeting is part of a worldwide search by western states to end the erratic pattern of international monetary affairs over the past two years.

Next week, member nations of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) meet in Tokyo to open sweeping negotiations aimed at cutting tariffs or non-tariff restrictions to enhance the flow of international trade.

Confronted with the rapidly changing patterns of wold political economic and monetary relations, nations of the so-called non-aligned group will seek a larger say in world affairs at a 70-country summit in Algiers opening tomorrow.

A Humid Holiday On East Coast

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

While hot, humid air baked the East today, residents along the Texas and Louisiana coast prepared for the onslaught of tropical storm Delia.

Heavy rains in Baltimore yesterday provided temporary relief from the heat, but the storm also touched off a fire when lightning struck storage tanks of Continental Oil, and high winds unroofed at least six homes. However, no injuries were reported.

Temperatures continued to soar Monday in many major cities of the East and Midwest, but thunderstorms also cooled other areas.

In Chicago yesterday, temperatures were in the 90s. In New York City readings climbed to 96 and the power drain created by air conditioners caused an electrical crisis in one borough.

New York City's power company, Con Edison, said 1,900 apartment residents in Queens agreed to a "voluntary blackout," and cut off all electricity in their apartments while utility repairmen tried to replace a burned-out cable.

Heat and moisture rising from Pittsburgh's Three Rivers caused 30 spectators to collapse with heat prostration as they watched a Labor Day doubleheader between the Pirates and the St. Louis Cardinals.

About 3,000 fans left the ball game because of the heat. None of the stricken fans was hospitalized, a stadium spokesman said.

The Texas coastal communities of Sabine Pass and Brazosport were isolated today as high tides and heavy rain from tropical storm Delia produced flash flooding. The approach of the storm forced residents along the entire upper coastal area to board up their buildings.

Widespread thunderstorm activity was reported in the Mississippi Valley Monday. A cold front brought cool weather to the Western states.

An electrical storm whipped through the Baltimore metropolitan area last night, igniting several fires, flooding scores of streets and ripping rooftops off of at least five homes, police report.

There also were downpours in the Plains. More than an inch of rain fell at Lincoln, Neb., Miles City, Mont., and West Plains, Mo.

In contrast, snow fell for the second day in Glacier National Park and one to three inches of snow covered the ground at Cook City, Mont.

Three Hotels May Be Closed

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — Copenhagen's fire chief said today three "dangerous" hotels may be ordered closed to avoid another tragedy such as Saturday's blaze that killed 35 persons at a downtown hotel described as a "fire trap."

Twenty Americans, 11 tourists from other countries and four Danes perished in a fire that gutted the Hotel Hafnia.

"Three other hotels must be considered dangerous, and a fire there could easily develop into a similar catastrophy," said Fire Chief Jan Amnitzboell.

AN 800-POUND PROBLEM

An unidentified Monterey policeman ponders the problems in removing this 800-pound dead sea turtle from a roadway leading to a beach. According to witnesses, the turtle was hauled to the spot over the weekend by skin divers who apparently planned to clean it on the spot for the shell but later abandoned the project. A spokesman at the Hopkins Marine Station said sea turtles are rarely seen in the Monterey Bay area, and this is the first one in 15 years.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Report Says Girls Are Now Starting Menstruation Sooner

According to a report in MD Medical Newsmagazine, girls start to menstruate (menarche) at an earlier age. In fact, the age has been dropping about three or four months a decade for the past 100 years. Improved nutrition plays a role because, when a girl reaches a critical weight, certain chemical changes occur that stimulate the hypothalamus in the brain. This in turn starts the regulation of the menstrual cycle. The age of onset varies from 10 to 16 with an average of 13 years. Several years may elapse before the ovaries produce ovum with regularity.

IF THIS IDEA is correct, overweight girls should begin to menstruate earlier than the "Twiggies." Other theories include the increased use of artificial light. This takes us back to the older view that the menarche occurred sooner in tropical climates where daylight lasts longer.

Most women can expect to spend 2,000 days during their lifetime involved in this natural process. Between periods, the lining membrane of the uterus thickens gradually in preparation for the fertilized ovum and when this does not take place, bleeding occurs as the thickened membrane sloughs off. Coiled arteries in this part of the uterus constrict from four to 24 hours before the onset of menstruation. Without this natural check valve, bleeding would be excessive.

PREMENSTRUAL tension refers to the irritability, anxiety, depression, fatigue, abdominal distension, and weight gain some women develop a week to 10 days before a period. Twenty to 50 per cent of normal women are said to be bothered by one or more of these symptoms. A British woman physician includes alcohol exces,, nymphomania, insomnia, dizziness, nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain and what-not as part of the premenstrual syndrome.

In Britain and France, half the crimes committed by females occur during this time of the month.

REMEDIES for menstrual disorders could fill a drugstore — they include pain killers, hormones, tranquilizers, mood elevators, antispasmodics, diuretics, and antianxiety products. The hormonal effects of the pill are helpful and let us not forget Lydia Pinkham.

Tax Limit Plan Statements Hit As Distortions

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. today accused Attorney General Evelle J. Younger and backers of Gov. Ronald Reagan's tax initiative of placing "distortions and misleading statements" in an official ballot pamphlet prepared for voters.

Brown said he intends to hold up printing of the pamphlet until Friday. It had been scheduled to be printed today.

The Democrat, a contender for his party's 1974 gubernatorial nomination, said he would give Younger and Reagan's "Committee for Lower Taxes" another day to prepare accurate statements for the pamphlet.

Quake Victims Receive Gifts

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The wife of President Salvador Allende of Chile arrived last night bringing aid for victims of the disastrous Mexican earthquake Aug. 28.

Although more than 700 persons were killed and destruction was widespread in scores of towns, President Luis Echeverria declined all other foreign offers of help, including one from the United States.

Allende's wife, Hortensia Bussi, told newsmen at the airport she had brought three artificial kidneys and a prefabricated school. She said her visit returned one by Echeverria's wife to Chile with earthquake aid in 1971.

Papers To Create A News Agency

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Thirty-four daily newspapers voted last night to create a news agency for internal news to replace United Press International and the Associated Press, barred from providing Argentine news to Argentine clients.

The UPI-AP ban was announced last month and published yesterday in the official government record. It goes into effect next month.

Besides barring the two agencies from supplying domestic news to Argentine clients, the decree also calls for the elimination of the use of foreign words in domestic news copy and calls on Argentina's media to devote at least half of its coverage to news of the country.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Groucho Marx was in a cheerful mood for an interview yesterday at Century City Hospital.

The 77-year-old Marx was admitted Friday for treatment of a cold and a check-up. He said he expects to stay in the hospital a few more days.

"There isn't anything wrong with me," he insisted. "I could have stayed home, but I'm madly in love with two nurses in this hospital."

Hotel Falls Wrong Way

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Two businesses adjacent to the 53-year old Penn Harris Hotel were destroyed yesterday when a section of the hotel "fell the wrong way" during controlled demolition.

councilmen.

An attorney hired by the councilmen was reportedly available today to assist persons who found themselves challenged. Patrick Corrigan, a campaign worker for the councilmen, said voters on the challenge list have been contacted and urged to vote.

Few voting conflicts had been reported by midmorning, although precinct workers reported a heavy stream of voters.

At two precincts at Cotati City Hall, 82 voters had cast ballots out of a possible 585 and at the Cotati Veterans Memorial Building, 52 out of a possible 375 voters had cast ballots.

Polls will remain open until 8 p.m. A total of 1,661 residents are eligible to vote.

Price Fixing Of Gas Is Attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The American Petroleum Institute says there is a serious U.S. shortage of natural gas "because of 20 years of government price-fixing."

Frank N. Ikard, the institute's president, said it was "imperative that Congress take action now to provide adequate incentive to draw the gas-producing industry back into the business of exploring for a producing natural gas."

The industry group has complained that price controls imposed by the federal power commission at the wellhead, or the production source, have held natural gas prices artificially low and have discouraged expensive exploration for new gas fileds.

A Lot Of Free Coffee And Tea

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's opposition Labor Party has signed a new pay agreement with its headquarters staff that includes a free cup of coffee every morning and a free cup of tea every afternoon.

But the agreement is retroactive to May 1, which means the 100 staff members have more than 18,000 cups of coffee or tea coming.

Officials have ruled out ordering every employee to drink doubles for the next four months, making the award good in cash or not awarding the back coffee or tea at all.

"We think the best thing is to leave it to the staff to sort out among themselves," said a headquarters spokesman.

WASHINGTON (UPI — Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of the University of Notre Dame, will receive a "profile in courage award" from the John F. Kennedy Lodge of B'Nai B'rith in Washington Sept. 13 for "his outstanding contribution to the advancement of civil rights" in the United States.

A superior court jury on Aug. 9 convicted Gaines, 20, of taking the money from a floor safe at Taco Boat restaurant after overcoming two teen-aged girls working there May 31.

A codefendant, James Edward Morgan, who pleaded guilty to the robbery Aug. 2 was to be sentenced today.

$150,000. Some $40,000 in architectural fees will be deducted from this sum before construction.

Supervisor Robert A. Roumiguiere termed the bus shelter cost "peanuts" compared to the millions spent on the system.

Foreaker added that the 10 shelters at least would "do some good for part of the public." He described them as "small, made of wood and of simple, functional design. We're not talking about very grand shelters," he said.

The 10 sites picked by Foreaker for temporary shelters, in order of priority, are: San Anselmo's Hub, Tamalpais Junction, the intersection of Magnolia and Madrone avenues in Larkspur, Sir Francis Drake High School in San Anselmo, Rowland and South Novato boulevards in Novato, College of Marin, Strawberry Town and Country Village Shopping Center, Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and South Eliseo Drive, Tiburon Boulevard and Cecilia Way and Las Gallinas Avenue and Miller Creek Road.

A broken sewer line which is spewing raw sewage into the south fork of Gallinas Creek has prompted an emergency meeting of the Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board at 7:30 p.m. today at the district plant, according to Edward Tibbetts, district engineer.

The broken force main will be repaired immediately, Tibbetts said.

He said the line, which crosses the channel at the end of Vendola Avenue, was reportedly punctured by dredging equipment last week.

The two Lyons restaurants in Marin County have joined with their affiliates throughout Northern California in extinguishing the open-pit natural gas fires that have burned for many years in front of each restaurant.

According to James T. LeCompte, president of the chain, Lyons elected to do away with its long-standing trademark as a contribution to the energy conservation effort in the United States.

AFRICAN VILLAGE — Africa's beautiful Valley of a Thousand Hills, picturesque but poor in soil, is benefitting today from efforts to grow vegetables in the sun-bleached hills.

African Valley Making Comeback

By CLIVE LAWRANCE

BOTHA'S HILL, South Africa — The Valley of a Thousand Hills is one of the loveliest sights in South Africa. The old road between the cities of Durban and Pietermarizburg runs along its borders, and passing tourists stop frequently to gaze at the hills that roll for miles into a pale blue haze.

But a closer look reveals a less beautiful picture. The valley has some of the poorest soil in the country. Droughts occur almost every year when nothing will grow. Even in the wet summer months the soil, a decomposed gneissic granite, is too impoverished to support its volume of people, and malnutrition is rife among the 45,000 Zulus who live there.

In terms of ecology and human life, this beautiful valley was heading downhill fast — until, in 1951, Dr. Halley Stott began a scheme that is slowly turning the side.

Now, even in winter, one can see green strips of land — vegetable gardens — among the sun-bleached hills. Soil erosion is being halted. And there are small glittering ponds stocked with fish. No figures are available, but doctors in the nearby hospital claim malnutrition is on the decline.

How is it being done?

Largely through the work of the Valley Trust founded by Stott as a welfare organization entirely dependent on public support. The basic aim of the trust is to improve the nutrition of the Valley of a Thousand Hills. This is done in four ways.

A demonstration food-preparation unit.

A corn grinding mill.

Increasing food production by means of vegetable gardens.

Fish culture.

Stott early discovered valley cooking methods largely destroyed the nutritional value of the food. Valley eating patterns didn't help either — for many years the people had grown corn and then traded the grain for refined meal and other less nutritive luxury foodstuffs.

Now Zulu people who come to the local hospital for treatment of malnutrition are persuaded to attend the food-preparation unit before returning home. The unit is run by Zulus, and only simple, available utensils are used in the instruction. Also, the Valley Trust set up the mill and persuaded the inhabitants to bring their grain there for grinding, thus preserving its nutritive value.

Perhaps the most remarkable aspect of the Valley Trust is its system of growing vegetables. The valley people were traditionally pastoralists, but with the coming of the white man their lives underwent a gradual change. Their traditional wholesome diet of whole grain corn, millet, legumes, amaasi, roots, tubers, and spinaches gave way to more easily obtainable refinded foods high in carbohydrates and deficient in protein and other nutrients.

The land — mainly steep rocky slopes — was never suitable for large-scale agriculture, but what productive potential it had was ruined by soil erosion, bad cultivation practices, and the demands of a growing population. Rain (about 33 inches annually) falls only in the summer and sometimes in torrential thunderstorms that wash away the soil and crops.

The problem was solved around 1956 by Zulu agriculturist Robert Mazibuko. He succeeded in growing vegetables — not only in the summer but in the winter, when the rest of the valley shriveled. The people of the valley saw that he didn't even use irrigation, wondered, and some came to inquire.

Today there are some 600 gardens scattered throughout the reserve. Not all are as good as the Valley Trust demonstration gardens, but they are growing foodstuffs during the dry winter when once nothing grew.

This is how it is done.

A trench is dug 60 feet long, seven feet wide, and three feet deep. The top soil is separated from the lower layers of subsoil. The bottom of the trench is loosened and the trench is filled as follows (starting with the bottom layer): three inches of top soil; one foot of veld grass; three inches of midsoil; one foot of veld grass; four inches of subsoil; one foot of veld grass; mixture of top soil and midsoil to a depth of 12 inches to stand about nine inches above the surface.

Compost, animal manure, or household refuse may be added, but no inorganic fertilizers or anything that is not available to the poorest household.

Once a trench is completed, a leguminous crop is grown immediately and dug in at the flowering stage. The second crop is usually cabbage or lettuce, both of which can withstand the heat of the decomposing grass. They do not yield an abundant crop, but are followed by sweet potatoes which yield extremely well. A rotation of crops is then grown and the garden is well on its way to producing in the drought months —as the trench retains moisture built up during the summer rains.

The Valley Trust has shown that a family can produce all the vegetables it needs simply by putting organic matter back into the soil —without chemical fertilizers, which they can neither afford nor understand. No tractors, plows, or bulldozers are required. Some gardens have been established on 45-degree rocky hillsides.

To cut down on soil erosion, the Valley Trust is showing the people how to dig pits along waterways. Offcut vegetables such as banana leaves are flung into the pits. Thus the soil trapped is rejuvenated and reused in gardens.

As the trenches are based on a simple principle, many Zulus came, saw, went back home, and did likewise. But, if asked, Mazibuko and his helpers go into the reserve and show the people how it's done. Mazibuko recently retired from the Valley Trust, but the work he began carries on under other able Zulu hands.

Fish cultivation has become another important aspect of better nutrition in the valley. There was a time when many Zulus would not eat fish as they considered them a kind of serpent. But this attitude is changing fast.

The valley has many "sponges" tucked away at the bottoms of little valleys. These are ideal for making small dams that are simple and cheap and can be done by the Zulus themselves. The dams are then stocked with Tilapia mossambica and Melanopleura fish species. There now are hundreds of dams scattered through the valley.

There is an old Chinese proverb that the Valley Trust likes to quote: "If you give a man a fish, you feed him for one day. . .but if you teach a man to fish, you feed him for many days."

This saying could apply to all their work.

The tremor, which registered 3.6 on the Richter scale, occurred at 2:11 a.m. PDT and was located five miles northwest of here, according to the Caltech seismographic laboratory in Pasadena.

The laboratory termed the quake, which was felt in Ventura, Santa Barbara and Carpenteria, "pretty small." No damages were reported.

Want Your Own Island? There Are Plenty Around

By JO ANN LEVINE
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

Have you ever dreamed of owning an island, a kingdom all your own away from urban pressures and crowds? You still can do it, if you are prepared to pay the price and cope with the challenge of isolated living.

According to the U.S. Department of the Interior, Canada and the United States have something like a million coastal islands, not to mention islands in rivers, lakes and bays.

In the United States alone, there are 26,325 islands of 10 acres of more. This includes 5,100,000 acres all privately owned plus a million federal and half a million state-owned acres. There are, in fact, only seven states without islands of 10 acres or more — Wyoming, Oklahoma, North Dakota, New Mexico, Nevada, Colorado, and Arkansas.

Here is a land resource available for recreation, development, or preservation. And preservation ranks high among the Interior Department's publicly stated priorities.

"Apart from the land preserved in our national wilderness system, islands undoubtedly constitute our finest reservoir of unspoiled land," Interior says in its first island study called "Islands of America" ($2.50). Interior has recommended establishing a national system of trust and is urging private groups to consider buying islands for preservation.

But whether bought for preservation, for development, or sheer presonal enjoyment, islands are a good, if "somewhat offbeat," investment, reports Previews, Inc., a New York-based real-estate firm which at this writing, had over a dozen island listings.

They included a "personal island" such as the 21-acre $150,000 Draper Island in Wisconsin's Lac Vieux Desert and a developmental island such as 500-acre, $3,230,000 Hans Lolik, the fourth-largest island of the U.S. Virgin Islands. Previews also has listed 10 islands known as the Pelleluhu Islands near Papua, New Guinea, which are being offered as a group for 2 million Australian dollars (U.S. $2.5 million) to a buyer who will preserve the ecological character of the islands. The cheapest island, listed at $49,500, was described as a three-acre "water-ringed gem" in Moosehead Lake, Maine.

It is the bigger islands near centers of population which are the most attractive to developers. For example, 203-acre Patience Island off the coast of Rhode Island just recently sold to a developer for about $400,000. That is quite an increase from the time Canoicus, a Narragansett Indian, sold it to Gov. John Winthrop and Roger Williams in 1637 for "20 fathom of wampum and two coats." Patience Island — as well as Rhode Island's Prudence Island — were named after Williams's daughters and became part of their dowries.

Previews, Inc., says it is most important for an island-seeker to find a reputable real estate broker before buying.

For example, Previews, Inc., reports in the brochure on that "gem" in Maine: "The property's owners, choosing to retain as much of the rural charm as possible, have never installed electricity or telephone, and use water pumped from the lake. Cooking is done on a gas or wood stove."

In buying an island, it is also important to consider transportation, water supply, politis, taxes, investment potential, trees, soil and harbors.

"Many people who have once lived on an island have had it," says William Craig, head of cleint services division of Previews, Inc. "The solitude and the inconvenience finally gets to them. It gets too small for them."

That's why writer and comedian Jack Douglas is selling his Bird Lake island in Ontario. Driving his son to school in a snowmobile finally got to him. "I guess islands aren't too practical," Douglas notes, a point he has already documened with hilarity in his book "Shut Up and Eat Your Snowshoes."

"I still like the idea of getting away," he adds. But he notes that getting away doesn't mean escaping from reality.

"Once I lived in a big room over a garage (near Malibu beach)," he says, "and stared out at the ocean and never wrote a thing. I couldn't get in gear . . . I've found that no matter where you are, you have to close the drapes and forget about where you are . . . There's no ideal place to write. You always think there is."

Lot Split Hearing Tonight In Sausalito

The Sausalito City Council will consider an appeal by William Hynes of a planning commission denial of a lot split application for property on Marion Avenue at 8 p.m. today in city hall.

Councilmen also will consider granting a 10 cent rate increase requested by Sausalito Taxi Co.

Reed Trustees To Eye Lawsuit

The Reed School District superintendent will recommend settlement of a lawsuit against the former owner of the site of Reedland Woods School when the district board meets today at 8 p.m. at Del Mar School.

According to Supt. Ralph D. Giovanniello, the suit was filed because the former owner, Lytton Savings and Loan, improperly built a road near the school such that excess fill was left on school property.

Giovanniello said he did not wish to comment on the settlement until tonight.

Bicentennial Plans Need Pushing Now

Although the anniversary is still nearly three years away, the United States already is humming with plans for celebrating the bicentennial of its independence.

And, although three-quarters of a century elapsed after the Declaration of Independence before California became a part of the new nation, the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission of California has a long list of projects proposed for the celebration.

THERE HASN'T been much noise yet from the commission's headquarters in Sacramento. But a listing of its plans by Albert C. Johnson, its executive director and former organizer-lobbyist for the Professional Educators Group, shows it has not been just marking time.

Playing a large role in the planning is a San Rafael resident, Gretchen (Mrs. Edwin) Thomas, the commission's secretary.

The commission has grouped its proposed projects into three categories: "Heritage '76," "Festival U.S.A.," and "Horizons '76." Some of them are well on the way; others are still merely on paper, awaiting sponsorship in many cases — for the commission was set up to organize and encourage the centennial observance, not to put on the whole show with taxpayers' dollars.

SEVERAL of the projects are of particular interest to Marin.

A commission-sponsored project which ties in closely with current efforts by Marin Heritage and the Marin County Historical Society to identify and preserve early buildings in the "Rediscover America Program." Actually, this was started three years ago by the California Historial Society and America the Beautiful Fund. The commission is pushing for community efforts to locate, mark and restore buildings and sites that played roles in Spanish California in the period of the American Revolution.

A project endorsed by the commission is the Elks Lodge's Flag Day observance, of which the San Rafael lodge has been an active promoter. The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks expects to spend $100,000 by 1976 on encouraging display of American flags as a corollary of this observance.

There is local interest, too, because of the involvement of the late Waddell F. Smith of San Rafael, in the Pony Express Monument which will mark the site of the first Pony Express terminal in Sacramento. Money is still being raised for this, but completion in time for the bicentennial is expected.

IT CERTAINLY is not too early for communities to begin planning their own observances of the 200th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. The state commission stands ready to assist in such planning.

The bicentennial will provide an excellent opportunity for all Americans to rededicate themselves to the principles of human dignity and independence that so largely animated the founding fathers. And no city or town should overlook the anniversary.

'Non-Political' Regents' Long Terms Under Attack

By EARL G. WATERS

Another attempt to level the august regents of the University of California from their lofty heights is under way in the Legislature.

Striking at the unrealistic long terms now enjoyed by the regents, Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-Campbell, is pushing a constitutional amendment which would cut the present 16-year terms in half. He would also change the method of selection. All, excepting ex-officio members, now are named by the governor.

Vasconcellos is not alone in demanding a change in the terms and the makeup of the board of regents. Nor is the effort a partisan one. Assemblyman Dixon Arnett, R-Redwood City, has advocated similar changes. So, too, has Sen. Milton Marks, R-San Francisco. And each has been gathering support from colleagues in both parties.

THE IDEA OF LENGTHY terms was to put the university above politics. But the result has been to so entrench the regents that they have come to the view that they are slightly above the Almighty.

A demonstration of this attitude was given the public recently when the regents refused to disclose the terms of the employment contract given to U.C. President Charles J. Hitch. The document, executed in the secrecy of a closed meeting, obligated tax dollars for a salary greater than that of the governor, a grandiose mansion, expansive gardens, servants, limousine and chauffeur, and a lavish living expense allowance.

The regents resisted the idea of telling the taxpayers about how these public funds were being spent on the specious argument that it would "constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy". They might just as well have said "it's none of your business" or repeated the words of that economic royalist who said, "The public be damned".

It was just such arrogance that has prompted Vasconcellos to observe that the regents lack responsibility to anyone, "particularly the public".

THE IDEA that the regents are above politics is the quintessence of naivete. The ex-officio members are politicians. The appointive members are either that or millionaires or both. They just have their own brand of politics.

One may wonder why membership on the regents, a post which pays nothing, should have such an attraction that its members not only want 16-year terms but drool all over the governor for a second term. One would have to be a millionaire to get the picture. It is simply a matter of prestige. It is an ultra-exclusive social club.

But the university, with its multitude of problems, deserves a governing board with higher motivation than maintenance of social status.

The public should not be misled by the anguished wails of the regents who see their hallowed meetings being threatened by the proletariat.

The argument advanced by Regent William Coblentz that some other method of selection and shorter terms would infuse politics into a system which has been "extremely successful for 104 years" was certainly made in jest. Coblentz himself is a political animal. He won his regency appointment by virtue of having been a speech writer for former Gov. Pat Brown.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Reasons For Refusal Of TV Show Appearance

Your article of Sept. 1 stating in headlines that "Corte Madera Councilmen Refuse Recall Show Appearance" did not include some significant points:

We declined only to appear on the show proposed by the Community Video Association. We do not believe that it could fairly present our position and our reasons for that position. As outlined to us, half of the show would deal with community use of cable TV and the history and background of Corte Madera leading to the recall election. Then, another 30 minutes would be devoted to answers to specific questions about recall. With five persons (three councilmen and two of the recall leaders) given equal time, there would be only five or six minutes for each to make his comments. This does not seem long enough, considering the complexity of some of the background to the basic questions.

While we did decline to appear on the Community Video show, we made a specific point that any presentation made by the Community Video Association on the recall election should be made in sufficient time to allow us to prepare and present a rebuttal.

Mr. Pearlman's adverse remarks about our honesty and sanity were ill advised, but confirms the wisdom of avoiding involvement in his programs.

New Approach Needed To County Fair

Gerald Sisco's graphite on paper certainly set the tone of Marin County's 1973 Fair, dull and uninteresting. Perhaps it is because I have been an annual attender, I am tired of the rehash. The only thing really new was the model railroad exhibit, a great show with excellent attendance.

Let's try something new. Marin is a composite of communities, each with its own charm. An exhibit from each one could make an excitingly new fair.

I appeal to you, with your excellent coverage, to prod our supervisors into action. Let's get the communities involved and make the 1974 fair a County Fair, and stop aping the Art and Garden Festival which was beautiful in its old setting.

Editorial Displeases Development Opponent

I was extremely disappointed to read your editorial of Aug. 30 concerning the San Rafael City Council's action on the Gonzolez proposal for light industry development on the Smith Ranch. Not only was the editorial a biased, misleading account of the issues involved, but it shows a continuing lack of understanding on the part of your editorial staff of the new planning concepts operating in San Rafael. Your editorial leads one to believe that all problems were solved by Gonzolez; (sic.,) all bases covered. This is a gross misrepresentation. Certainly a new interchange is "envisioned" at Lucas Valley Road, but there is no plan for funding it. And the funding won't be available for several years. So what the local residents would be left with is a monumental traffic jam with a great potential for accidents while visions of an interchange float around the highway department offices in Sacramento. The Gonzolez proposal to funnel traffic out of the project over Paul Drive would only leave two jammed intersections within 100 feet of each other. . .

The real issue voted upon by the city council is larger than this however. The crucial issue is that no one development of this magnitude can be evaluated by itself. It must be judged in the light of everything surrounding it. The new general plan being formed now will enable city planners to do this. But we don't have the plan yet. Until we do, no one can say that a developer has "covered all the bases" . . .

BRUCE LEEB

San Rafael.

(The issuance of a "general plan conformity" certificate merely signifies that there is nothing in a proposed development which appears to be contrary to the developing general plan; it is not a permit for construction. That was what was authorized by the San Rafael Planning Commission, and overturned by the city council, in the case at issue. — Editor)

Congress Made Mess Of Post Office

I have ignored your previous editorials on the Postal Service, assuming those hysterical outbursts were due to some feud you were having with local postal officials. After Saturday's however, I feel your readers deserve better than the misinformation, falsehoods and downright slanders against the service, and us, its employees, that have characterized them.

If you published your newspaper the way you feel the Postal Service should be run, the San Rafael City Council would pass on all your expenditures, and put each story up to a vote. You would still be setting type by hand and operating out of offices furnished with egg crates and folding chairs. The newsprint shortage would be all your fault. Any one of your numerous retractions would be cause for shutting the paper down.

It should be obvious that to undo the mess that Congress created in nearly 200 years of neglect and political shenanigans will take more than two short years. Perhaps if we started from scratch and shut down for two years with no mail service it could have been done in that time.

Obviously, in the process of doing what had never been done before, the reorganization of the world's largest and most complex postal system, mistakes were made. That is what the management conferences you criticize were all about. Among the hundreds of ideas to improve service that were implemented was the complete restoration of the San Rafael Post Office as a full sectional center facility with continued processing of Marin County mail. This at the suggestion of local Marin County postmasters who themselves recognized that the San Francisco experiment was a mistake . . .

PAUL PENNA

Larkspur.

(Perhaps reader Penna missed the I-J editorials attacking the USPS plan to send all Marin mail to San Francisco for sorting — which we hope played their part in causing abandonment of the plan. It was the old Post Office Department, not USPS, that established the San Rafael Post Office as a regional facility. USPS was doing away with that until stopped. — Editor)

Environment Vs. Need For Oil Presents Maine With Dilemma

NORTHEAST HARBOR, Me. — Behind the serene exterior of Maine's beautiful coast there rages one of the fiercest struggles in the nation between environmentalists and developers. It turns on the construction of oil refineries sorely needed at this end of the supply line, which is without a single refinery in all of New England.

As elsewhere around the country, the environmentalists stand unyielding for the preservation of the state's natural beauty. They see the threat of oil spills and pollution menacing one of the last unspoiled treasures of coast, forest and lake. While there is no comparison in magnitude, it is like the struggle over the Alaska pipeline where the conservationists were finally overwhelmed by Congress with an act outlawing any further ltigation to stop the line that will tap the huge reserves of Alaska's North Slope.

THE IRONY IS THAT in Maine both sides are right. This was recognized by Gov. Kenneth Curtis, who backed a site-selection law. Under the governor's direction the first serious, well-documented presentation showed the necessary relationship between industrial development and conservation. The effort to implement this study is handicapped by the state's lack of trained personnel, which is one reason decision on the latest refinery application, at Eastport in the extreme north, is likely to be delayed for at least a year.

In Sen. Edmund Muskie, Maine has a national leader in the environmental movement. He has made it a foremost issue, which he could carry into the 1976 campaign when he will in all probability again be a contender for the Democratic nomination.

Beginning in 1968 the controversy in Maine centered around Machiasport, near Northeast Harbor, spectacularly beautiful country. Machiasport was an ambitious proposal for oil imported from abroad, with the creation of a free trade zone attracting industry.

Originally Muskie favored Machiasport as a start for the kind of development so badly needed in the Northeast. Later, however, he took the opposing view. Having seen what followed the massive oil spill at Santa Barbara, Calif., he decided that present technology was inadequate to cope with disasters on that scale. A tanker spill in Casco Bay at Portland was another reason for his change of mind. Today Machiasport is considered dead.

The opposition came not alone from conservationists. Because Machiasport would refine imported oil, powerful interests in the oil industry seeking to keep control of all resources used their best efforts to block the development. In any event, what had briefly flowered as a hopeful beginning for the state's development withered away.

THE PROPOSAL of the Pittston Oil Co. to build a refinry at Eastport, supplied by supertankers, is generating even greater controversy than did Machiasport. The tankers would have to pass through Canadian waters at the entrance to Passamaquoddy Bay. Full-page ads by the environmentalists point out that these are treacherous waters, with Passamaquoddy having the highest tides on the continent.

Canada's minister of fisheries and environment, Jack Davis, has already ruled that the tankers will be prohibited from passing through Canadian waters. A hint has come from Washington that this may be challenged under a Canadian-U.S. treaty of 1910. And Maine editorialists say that Canada's real interest is to see that the Pittston refinery goes to Nova Scotia or New Brunswick.

John A. Love, President Nixon's top energy adviser, warned the other day of a serious shortage of heating oil next winter. In Maine, at the end of the supply line, that could mean cold homes and slowed industry. If this happens it will be tangible proof of what it means to be on the farthest edge, with the nearest refinery complex in New Jersey.

SOON THE SUMMER visitors and the tourists will be heading south. Although ski resorts in the western part of the state have meant some addition to the economy, the season is really only three months long. And tourism is only about 17 per cent of Maine's total of goods and services.

Maine is a laboratory example of how vitally important it is to establish a national policy that will strike a balance between the environment and the ever more urgent need for energy. The piecemeal approach, the ups and downs of dire warning and environmental battles, is so obviously self-defeating.

Pakistan Lost The War But May Win The Peace

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

India won the 1971 war against Pakistan but could be losing the peace.

India has the superior military machine and the weight of numbers, but as the two sides resumed long overdue efforts to reach a political settlement on the subcontinent, time had worked for Pakistan's President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

In December, 1971, he had taken over a broken, defeated nation, fragmented by the loss of East Pakistan (Bangladesh) and threatened with further fragmentation because of deep ethnic and political differences in the area that remained.

In the loss of Bangladesh the country also had lost the source which in the past had supplied most of its foreign earnings.

THE POTENTIAL for internal conflict remains, but by astute leadership Bhutto so far has held things together, obtained a new constitution, enhanced his own power, and turned the country around toward economic stability.

India, on the other hand, never has recovered from the loss of some $500 million she spent feeding 10 million refugees from East Pakistan during the conflict and the additional burden of the care of 93,000 Pakistani prisoners of war since.

Three years of drought followed by floods have dashed her hopes of independence from outside aid and further depleted her resources.

Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi herself has declared the country to be going through its worst time since independence.

KEY ISSUES in the resumed India-Pakistani talks are Pakistan's recognition of Bangladesh, the future of the war prisoners held by India, and Bangladesh's determination to try 195 unidentified Pakistanis for war crimes.

Other points of difference are the 175,000 to 200,000 Bengalis stranded in Pakistan and the non-Bengali Moslem minority Biharis in Bangladesh who want to go to Pakistan.

Bihari numbers are estimated up to one million. Most of them sided with Pakistan during the war and now find themselves economic and social outcasts.

From the new Pakistan National Assembly, Bhutto has obtained authority to recognize Bangladesh when he deems it to be "in the best national interest."

He is using that authority as a weapon to obtain release of the Pakistani prisoners. He also threatens to try some 200 Bengalis on undisclosed charges if Bangladesh persists in its plan to hold war crime trails.

INTERNATIONALLY, Bhutto has strengthened his hand with a new agreement of mutual support with neighboring Iran and is reported to have sent military training teams into some other of the smaller but important Persian Gulf oil states. The air forces of both Kuwait and Abu Dhabi are said to be manned by Pakistanis.

India fears that despite U.S. denials, some of the massive supplies of U.S. arms sold to Iran may find their way to Pakistan.

On her side, India has signed an important new oil agreement with Iraq, Iran's rival in the Persian Gulf, and is seeking the favor of other Arab states.

Contributing to India's uneasiness is Bhutto's scheduled visit to the United States, Sept. 9-17.

Petalumans Rally To Assist Visiting Family Hit By Tragedy

Canadian-American relations got a healthy boost when Petalumans rallied to help a family when tragedy struck.

The Elmar Bertleson family returned to Barnaby, B.C., with heartwarming stories of help from Petalumans when they needed it most.

Soren Bertleson, 8, was killed in the accident on Highway 101. The parents and another son were injured. Two daughters were unhurt. The family station wagon was destroyed and all possessions lost.

MEN FROM the Petaluma Fire Department led the way with help as soon as ambulance drivers spread the word of what had happened. A temporary home was provided very quickly when firemen decided the family would be more comfortable in a house rather than a cold motel.

Mayor Helen Putnam reached friends with children who provided clothes for the family. Men from the police department also responded quickly with food and supplies, as well as transportation for hospital visits. Employees at Hillcrest Hospital provided endless invitations for dinners.

The family has since returned to some degree of normality at their home, but has not forgotten Petaluma's hospitality. Radio station CKNW at Vancouver, B.C., broadcast a special 45-minute program last week featuring Bertleson and Mrs. Putnam through a conference telephone call.

The Canadian consulate in San Francisco followed the family's plight closely, but found little assistance was needed since local residents responded so well. Officials there who spend most of their time working to improve relations between the two countries were high in their praise. "We're always gratified when we hear of American communiies responding like this," one official said. "An American family in trouble in Canada would hopefully receive the same kind of treatment."

SUCCESS SEEMS almost assured for the Cossak Associates fund-raising drive to gather $12,500 for Sonoma State College athletic programs.

College officials report residents of Sonoma and Marin counties are responding well to supply funds for the shoe-string sports operation there.

Students appear to have little new interest in sports or inclination for reinstating any students funds to support the programs. Evidently the associates will have to continue fund raising efforts in future years.

If the organization does continue and grow rapidly, the future may find students demanding a portion of the money be spent on cultural programs.

Departments that make up the Center for Performing Arts are hardly rolling in money and could use some funds.

A Plan To Save Buddhist Papers

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — The University of California at Berkeley and Nepal's Tribhuvan University have agreed to conduct a project beginning later this month to discover and preserve precious ancient Buddhist manuscripts.

The agreement was announced yesterday by Prof. J. F. Staal, chairman of the department of South Asian studies at the California institution.

Staal, a Dutch national, is heading a 17-man group of research scholars who will travel to remote monasteries and temples in the high Himalayas to microfilm ancient Tibetan Buddhist and Nepalese Sanskirt manuscripts, some of which are written on parchment.

"The valuable manuscripts are being, destroyed, sold or are in the process of decay. Eventually, these will be lost to the world," Stahl said last week.

Staal said the agreement would make it easier to obtain official permission to travel to areas where some of the oldest Buddhist shrines and monasteries are located. They are believed to possess precious Buddhist manuscripts brought by Tibetan monks centuries ago.

These areas, close to the Tibetan border, are normally barred for entry by foreigners.

Staal said a research team plans to trek through winding mountains paths at altitudes as great as 10,000 feet to locate the monasteries and camp close to the shrines.

The researchers will stay at the camps for three months during which they will study and film the manuscripts, Staal said.

Chrysler Says Union Demands Are Unclear

DETROIT (UPI) —A top Chrysler Corp. negotiator said today the United Auto Workers union still has not spelled out completely its priorities for a new contract, just 11 days away from a possible strike.,

Speaking to newsmen before bargaining resumed at Chrysler's world headquarters, industrial relations director William Bavinger said: "We will certainly have to know soon what those priorities are."

There appeared little chance that the UAW and Chrysler would announce either an agreement or a strike before the deadline of 11:59 p.m., Sept. 14. If no agreement is reached, 127,500 U.S. and Canadian autoworkers may walk off the job.

"As we go along we'll have to know what the union has in mind for a settlement," Bavinger said, adding that bargainers probably will begin evening sessions this week. He said negotiations are about at the same place as they were in 1970 when General Motors was the strike target.

Bavinger said there were too many union demands still on the table. He said there were four that dealt with bereavement pay alone and 19 with holiday pay. He said these will have to be narrowed down.

Skylab Explorers Trace Storms

HOUSTON (UPI) —The Skylab 2 space explorers photographed earth's wonders today, aiming their cameras at tropical storms, volcanos, crops and oceans.

Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma, catching up on their earth surveys, had two picture-taking sweeps covering 11,400 miles over South America, northern Africa, southern Europe, Central America, Florida, the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

The pilots were asked to photograph storm Christine which swept over the Virgin Islands and to televise tropical storm Delia which was threatening the Texas Gulf Coast.

Flight controllers, meanwhile, braced themselves in case Delia blew through the Space Center.

The space fliers beamed back a live television show of Delia yesterday as it moved toward the Texas-Louisiana coast, reporting the storm's eye was apparently obscured from their view by high clouds.

Flight Director Donald R. Puddy said a team of 26 flight officials had been ready to fly to the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., if the raging storm knocked out the capability of communicating with the spaceship

The plan was scrubbed because officials late Monday decided the situation was not serious enough to warrant the action.

The flight director praised Bean, Garriott and Lousma for their "excellent spirit" as they plugged away at scientific work, and especially for their response to and watching an unexpectedly active sun.

"Their cooperation has been tremendous," he said. "They've shown an excellent spirit throughout. Their morale is still very high and they would stay there for a long time if that was feasible."

Puddy added that solar scientists had been "extremely fortunate" to have such an active sun during the Skylab flights, especially since forecasts had been for a quiet period. He said four flares, or explosions of energy off the solar surface, had been seen the last two days.

Crews, Planes Halt Lake County Blaze

CLEARLAKE OAKS, Calif. (UPI) —An army of fire fighters and fleet of air tankers last night stopped the spread of a blaze that charred more than 22,000 acres of valuable watershed in this resort area.

The National Park Service declared containment when crews of firemen trained in close-range fire techniques succeeded in establishing lines in the Chocolate Peak wilderness 10 miles north of here in Lake County. Full control was expected late today.

Forest rangers said they believed the blaze was set deliberately. It started Saturday and gusty winds quickly spread the flames out of control. Hundreds of persons were evacuated from cabins and mobil homes. Only six buildings were destroyed.

This was the worst fire in this Northern California mountainous region in years. Forest rangers said 10,000 of the charred acres were in the rugged Mendocino National Forest.

A total of 1,250 firemen were used to battle the flames. The crews trained for close-range work were called to handle the "hot spots" which troubled fire fighters yesterday. A dozen aircraft were used to drop fire retardants on the flames.

An emergency rehabilitation team was called in to study the watershed damage and draw up proposals for forestry restoration, the National Park Service said. A spokesman added that three million board feet of timber was ruined.

No Charges Filed After Fatal Crash

CLEVELAND (UPI) —Joseph A. Chaney, 22, of Cleveland, the driver of a car which hurtled off a freeway and killed five spectators at an air show nearby, was ordered to appear in court today, although no formal charges have been filed.

Police said Chaney's car was speeding when it hit the rear of a smaller car, broke a utility pole and plowed into the spectators Sunday. Besides the fatalities, two other persons, both children, were injured.

Authorities have held Chaney in jail since the accident while deciding what specific charges to file.

The victims of the crash were standing on a patch of grass watching the Air Force Thunderbirds flying team at the nearby Burke Lakefront Airport.

"I was just about to go across the drive and tell people to get off the grass," said Frazier Spates, an auxiliary policeman. "Then I saw a pole flying. I went to one fellow. He was already dead. I saw one boy was dead. And I went to another fellow. All he said was, 'Oh Lord, save me.'"

The car flipped over three times and sheared a direction standard before partially breaking apart and coming to rest on its top, witnesses said.

The accident killed Gery Williams, 40, his son, Paul, 7, of Eastlake, Ohio, and Camillio J. Resch, 70, his son, John Resch, 36, and his grandson, Terry Resch, 11, all of Lorain, Ohio.

Two other Williams children were injured. Christopher, 9, was in critical condition at St. Vincent Charity Hospital with head and leg injuries. His sister, Karen, 5, was treated and released.

John Resch's French poodle, Pierette, was also struck and killed in the accident.

Relief To Pakistan

LAHORE, Pakistan (UPI) — Maurice J. Williams, President Nixon's special relief coordinator, estimated today that the United States has provided 50 per cent of the international flood relief to Pakistan.

Seagoing Radio Station Established By Preacher

CAPE MAY, N.J. (UPI) — Fundamentalist preacher Carl McIntire, whose radio station was shut down by the government because he did not give equal time for opposing views, has established a new station in international waters just off the coast.

Dedication ceremonies for McIntire's new at-sea radio staton were held yesterday, but mechanical problems have kept him off the air so far, and it is not known when his gospel broadcasts will actually begin.

McIntire, using a 140-foot converted minesweeper as a base of operations, dropped anchor just outside the United States' three-mile territorial limit six days ago.

The ship has a 10,000-watt transmitter set to 692 kilocycles, virtually the same frequency as the Media, Pa., station shut down July 4 by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).

The FCC shut down WXUR, the former gospel station, for violating the "fairness doctrine." The FCC said McIntire, pastor of the Bible Presbyterian Church of Collingswood, N.J., refused equal time for programs with opposite views.

"Our fairness doctrine will be dictated by our conscience, not by politicians," said McIntire. "We've got First Amendment rights on the seas. We thank God for the freedom we have on the Atlantic."

McIntire, who read a "manifesto for freedom" at the dedication ceremonies, said the FCC was attempting to block broadcasting from the ship under the pretense it did not have a required marine license.

He said the marine licensing requirement was an attempt to "stretch" current regulations, and argued there is nothing illegal about broadcasting AM radio programs from points outside the three-mile international territorial limit.

"If they come at us, we will challenge the constitutionality of the licensing system. They don't license newspapers as they do radio stations," he said. "All we're doing is talking or singing or praying—not calling for revolution."

Ruling Made In Wife's Death

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The wife of Folsom Prison's former warden has been ruled a suicide victim by the Sacramento County coroner's office.

Sally Craven, 43, was found dead Friday in a boat near Walnut Grove. Her husband Walter brought the boat ashore to a marina and reported the gunshot death, ruled a suicide yesterday.

Craven was recently named deputy director of the state Department of Corrections.

Jordan's King Hussein

Although his country is troubled by serious political and economic problems, Jordan's flamboyant King Hussein usually manages to flash a big grin. Hussein, who often pilots his own plane, attended schools in Egypt and England. He succeeded his father to the throne in 1953. During his reign, he has weathered a series of crises, partly because he has had the loyalty of the Jordan Arab Army. Drawn into the war against Israel in 1967, his country lost a substantial amount of territory. While seeking to have the Israeli-occupied territory returned peacefully, King Hussein has worked through the United Nations to achieve a lasting peace in the Mideast.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the UN special representative for the Mideast?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Labor Day in the Soviet Union is celebrated May 1st.

Checks Latest Treasure For Collectors

By CLAYTON JONES
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BOSTON — Next time you balance your checking account, look again at those canceled checks.

Old checks — especially those with detailed vignettes or famous signatures — are bouncing back as a new treasure for a novel breed of collectors. Today's colorful scenic ones, too, are big hits.

A nostalgic urge to hound out, research, frame and trade vintage checks has sprung up in the United States in the last three years.

For instance, current hot items on the check market are checks used by Charles Lindberg to buy his planes and checks signed by Civil War generals. (A Robert E. Lee check sold for $180 recently.)

Checks of the 19th Century especially tend to capture the imagination. This era of engraved, fine-lined check drawings of gods and goddesses, steam locomotives, sailing ships, official seals, Latin motifs, flowers, and crops produced items now selling for a pretty penny.

Check collectors (or "checkophiles" as they do not prefer to be called) tend to revere the old and historic — a new club called the Check opened, and there's even a check museum in Missouri. But they do acknowledge the bright "new look" of custom-made checks offered by many banks since 1964.

Such modern decorations include mod swirls, coats of arms, floral motifs, endangered species, photographs, or you-name-it — all very collectable items for Round Table members.

Over 22 billion checks a year are processed by the nation's 14,000 banks, so club members have no difficulty in amassing interesting checks.

Why the sudden movement to save these monetary memento)?

"Some day everyone will have credit cards or electronic checks, bills will be paid through a bank account and personal checks will be obsolete — and valuable," explains check enthusiast Dr. Harold Don Allen.

"Check collectors, perhaps more than any other numismatists, deal with highly individualized materials. Each item has a many-faceted history to tell."

The Round Table, with about 300 world members and a quarterly publication ("The Check List"), plans to salvage a colorful slice of American life by rounding up historical and modern checks.

The museum, run by the School of the Ozarks, displays a "terrific collection of checks," says Robert Flaig of Cineinnati, Round Table president.

Best sources for aged checks are flea markets and old trunks, says Flaig.

Almost all checks of interest are, as yet, collected and traded at very little expense compared to other numismatic (study of monetary objects) prices. The specialty collectors barter for their own class of checks — whether it be for aesthetic passion, historical curiosity, autograph collecting, or just plain profit.

Club members forecast more cooperation than competition among collectors in the years ahead.

"The coin business has gotten to the extent where it takes a rich man to buy coins," says Harry T. Williams, who delights in checks picturing steam locomotives bearing cow-catchers.

American checks are not always paper, either. Some checks have been written — and honored — on a variety of materials: beaver skin, a boiler plate, a banana, a bottle label, a fish, a fender, a side of a cow, steel (written with a submachine gun), an egg, a tree limb, a bathing suit, and a shingle.

Author To Delay Visit To Russia

COLOGNE, Germany (UPI) — West German author Guenter Grass has temporarily suspended plans for an early visit to the Soviet Union.

Grass said yesterday he was asked to postpone the trip by Bonn's ambassador to the Soviet Union, Ulrich Sahm, because of the atmosphere in Moscow in connection with the trials of dissidents.

Grass said he hoped to make the Moscow trip later this year together with Nobel Prize winner author Heinrich Boell.

Fall Won't Keep Student From Construction Work

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — A young construction worker who fell six stories to the ground and escaped with limited injuries says he will climb the scaffolds again because that's how he is earning his way through school.

Paul Wilson, 22, of Hallandale was working on an unfinished Miami Beach building two weeks ago when his hard hat fell off and he reached out to grab it.

According to Wilson's coworkers, he plunged like a swan diver before striking the hard dirt below.

"I bounced a few times," said Wilson, a senior at the University of Florida. "The line of my body must have absorbed the shock."

Wilson's left arm and the left side of his face hit in a shallow gully while the rest of his body struck higher ground.

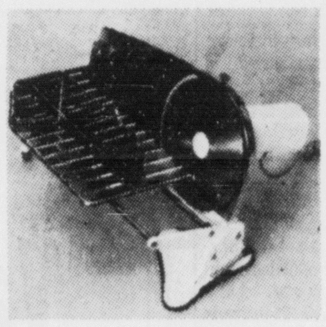

The fall shattered Wilson's jaw, the roof of his mouth, his nose and cheek bones. Doctors theorized that he was saved by being in excellent physical condition at the time of the fall.

A Call By Arabs To Boycott Israel

ALGIERS (UPI) — Arabs called on neutral countries today to outlaw Israel as long as its troops occupy Arab territory.

The Arab group at an international meeting of nonaligned states urged third-world countries to boycott Israel diplomatically, economically, militarily, culturally and through naval and air transport.

A working paper prepared by the Arab group attending the foreign ministers' conference, said action should be taken under Chapter Seven of the U.N. Charter concerning sanctions.

The paper has been circulated among delegations as a basis of discussion. Conference sources said a draft resolution on the Middle East probably will be worked up for presentation at the heads of state meeting which opens Wednesday.

Another group of 16 observers, composed of African liberation movements, the Palestinian guerrillas and the Puerto Rican Socialist party, was working on a draft charter for mutual cooperation among themselves, according to Palestinian sources.

Wife Contesting Will Of Husband

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — A rich businessman who died in 1972 left nearly $340,000 to the Israeli Air Force, $42,000 to his son if he got a divorce, and not a penny to his wife.

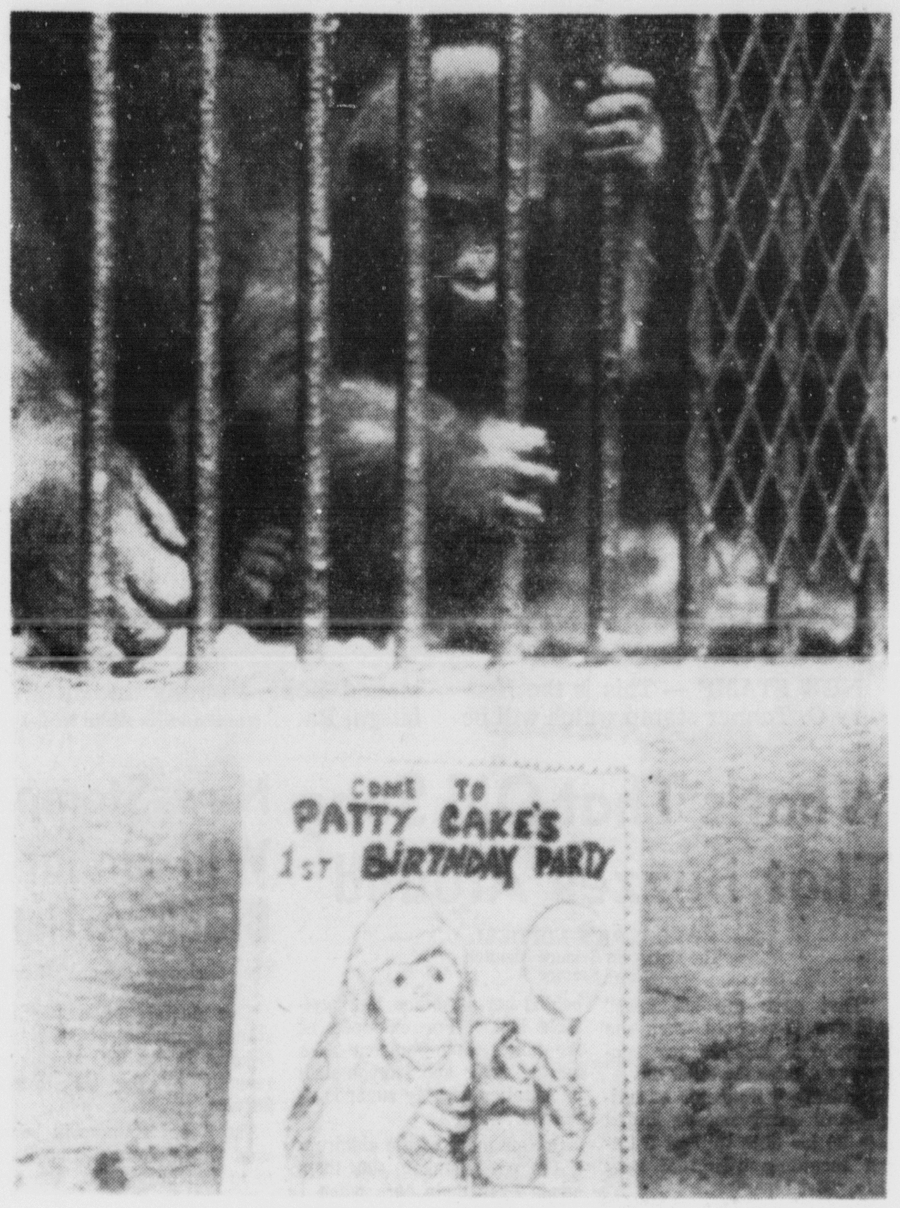

The widow asked the Supreme Court yesterday to determine if her husband was mentally competent when he wrote the will.

The businesman was Zvi Harry Haber who died in March, 1972, at the age of 56. Mrs. Leah Haber, 52, said she would contest the documents.

At a hearing yesterday, William Harris, the counsel for the executors, asked the court to grant probate.

Two Ross Youths Nabbed In Dormitory Burglary

Two Ross teen-agers were cited to probation authorities and loot was recovered yesterday following the burglary of four rooms of a San Francisco Theological Seminary dormitory in San Anselmo.

San Anselmo police said they recovered cash totaling $125 and loot ranging from watches to pens and a necklace at the homes of a 15-year-old Ross youth and his 14-year-old acquaintance.

Police said officers went to the two homes in Ross after a witness supplied police with license plates of two boys seen yesterday near the dormitory at 125 Mariposa Avenue.

Police said the two had walked into open rooms at the dormitory and rummaged through desks and drawers.

Identities of the youths were withheld on a standing order of Marin Superior Court Judge Joseph G. Wilson.

Border Flooded By Illegal Aliens

SAN DIEGO (UPI) —An unusually large number of illegal aliens for a holiday weekend were arrested along the Mexican Border since last Friday, U.S. Immigration officials said Monday.

Marshall Metzgar, watch commander for the U.S. Border Patrol, said nearly 1,000 aliens have been arrested, several hundred more than usual.

A pickup truck loaded with illegal aliens hidden in the covered bed of the vehicle smashed into the rear of a Border Patrol car stopped for a red light in Chula Vista, Calif., Metzgar said. No one was injured.

The aliens told officers they had promised to pay $225 each upon arrival in Los Angeles.

What's That Old Song That Buzzes Around

By RODERICK NORDELL
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

"That gave me hot lips!" said our 11-year-old when she bestowed a kiss on my sunswept shoulder the other day.

Naturally I went into an imitation of Henry Busse's muted solo on his once famous trumpet recording with that very title, "Hot Lips."

Wouldn't anybody?

"Not necessarily," I can hear that 11-year-old saying in a favorite phrase borrowed from her grandmother.

Of course I echo her with a few bars of "It Ain't Necessarily So."

Don't blame me if I feel a song coming on day in, day out. (I'm not even counting the three titles in that sentence.) I seem to have been "imprinted" by songs like those animals that are "imprinted" by the first thing they see after they are born and think it is their mother.

Some comfort comes from the 14-year-old who was musing this summer that when the radio station plays the old hits — all of six months old — he thinks of how he felt when he was listening to them way back then. I believe someone has the theory that the songs you listen to in those years of early youth become the touch-stones for whatever you hear later.

Someone who grew up on Cole Porter and George Gershwin may shudder to think of the current generation judging the songs of its maturity by what it hears of today. Of course, the best of today does make that "Hot Lips" trumpet solo sound rather primitive — but it's mine, do you hear me, mine! ("Mine" that is, by Gershwin from the Broadway show, "Let 'em Eat Cake.")

Still I'm sure the 14-year-old doesn't mean to harp on my maturity when he says my hair is getting not gray but silver like the man on "Mission Impossible." When I start singing, "Silver threads among the go-o-o-ld," he interrupts with, "No, it's gray, it's gray."

Et tu, filius? For some reason all the members of my own family have their ways of squelching my talent for lyric recall. My wife — who I'm afraid had cause to recognize song cues even before we were married — has developed a method of cupping her hand behind her ear when the inevitable looms. For example, at the table, when someone asks for the sugar and I croon such information as "My sugar is so refined . . ."

One or more of the children, if I'm not mistaken, slap their hands over their ears when I attempt to join the conversation at relevant points with, "There used to be a song about that, it went –" This is true even when I reach as far toward the children's point in time as Arlo Guthrie and reply to the offer of a kosher dill with his song, I don't want a pickle, just want to ride on my motorsickle."

What'll I do (Irving Berlin) if I started doin' what comes naturally (Berlin again) from this moment on (Cole Porter) and they didn't believe me (Jerome Kern)?

I guess I'll have to dream the rest . . .

About a quarter to nine, I let a song go out of my heart — and the angels sing.

For sentimental reasons I'll take romance.

I may be wrong but I like to recognize the tune.

Who cares? Do I worry? No, no, Nanette.

Ain't misbehavin'. I'm bidin' my time. I'm gonna accentuate the positive accident'ly on purpose.

I'd climb the highest mountain, but I've got a feeling I'm falling, and I've got a feeling you're fooling.

Give me the simple life. It's so peaceful in the country down in the valley down by the old mill stream by the light of the silv'ry moon, and the green grass grew all around.

Baby, it's cold outside, but I've got my love to keep me warm. I'll get by . . .

Darn that dream. I'm confessing it could happen to you when the deep purple falls in my reverie. But you know and I know I want to be happy, and happy days are here again when the red red robin comes bob bob bobbin' along . . .

So long for a while, that's all the songs for a while.

"Daddy, will you stop!"

What can I say, dear, after I say I'm sorry?

"I said stop."

Can't we be friends?

"Mother, will you tell daddy to stop?"

I want a girl just like the girl —

"What's the matter with father?"

Very good, dear, I never knew you'd heard "What's the Matter with Father?" It was by Van Alstyne and Williams in 1910. Even before my time.

New Stamp Will Honor Black Artist

The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

The design of a postage stamp honoring artist Henry Ossawa Tanner was announced recently by the U.S. Postal Service.

The 8-cent stamp will be issued with ceremonies on Sept. 10 in Pittsburgh, Pa., the artist's birthplace.

Tanner (1859-1937) was a prominent black painter of Biblical themes. He spent most of his career in France, which country made him a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor and hung his art in the Louvre.

The stamp is in the American Arts series, which also honors composer George Gershwin, novelist Willa Cather, and poet Robinson Jeffers. All four stamps are semi-jumbo in size and were designed by Mark English of Georgetown, Conn.

Esther Porter of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing modeled the stamp, which will be printed on the Andreotti gravure press. There will be 40 stamps to the pane, with six plate numbers.

Combined with a portrait of Tanner, in montage, is an artist's palette and a rainbow. The background of the stamp is brown, and the inscriptions in gold are at the bottom: "Henry O. Tanner," top: "U.S. 8c" and "American Painter."

Tanner's portrait is based on a painting made in 1902 by Thomas Eakins, under whom he had studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. The portrait was executed during one of Tanner's brief returns to the United States.

First day cancellation requests should be sent to "Tanner stamp, Postmaster, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15219," enclosing the proper remittance. Request should be postmarked no later than Sept. 10.

Twin World Existence Theorized

The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

At last, after decades of speculation, astronomers feel they may have evidence for the existence of "mirror-image" worlds elsewhere in the universe.

Mankind could look at these twin worlds, but never touch. Were humans ever to reach them, both astronauts and spaceship would vanish in a violent burst of radiation.

Such worlds would be made of what physicists call anti-matter. This is very like ordinary matter except that certain properties, such as electric charge, are reversed. In earthly laboratories, particles of matter and anti-matter form in equal amounts out of pure energy. The two kinds of matter recombine again into radiant energy when they meet.

If this happens in the laboratory, should it not also happen in the larger universe? scientists ask. And in the vastness of space, where the two kinds of matter could exist isolated from each other, should not anti-matter worlds exist today?

Basic theory answers "yes" to both questions. But, until now, there has been no positive indication that cosmic anti-matter does, in fact, exist.

Now, analyses of observations made during Apollo 15 and 16 moon missions, as well as preliminary data from the high-energy-radiation-observing satellite SAS-B, show the distinctive kind of radiation that Floyd W. Stecker of America's Goddard Space Flight Center calculates must come from the collision of matter and anti-matter in space.

Starting with the spectrum of radiation given off by particle and or anti-particle collisions in the laboratory, Stecker predicted that there should be a "bulge" in the universe's gamma-ray spectrum in the 100-million-election-volt range. Gamma rays are like S-rays only they are even more energetic.

The size of this special bulge, Stecker says, corresponds to the average volume of the regions of matter and anti-matter. In smaller-sized regions there would be more points of contact between matter and anti-matter worlds, more collisions, and so more gamma radiation. Conversely, the larger region, the smaller this intensity should be.

These latest results show only a small increase, so the regions must be very large — about the size of clusters of galaxies. Our own galaxy, however, appears to be composed totally of ordinary matter.

Although these observations are still controversial, they swing the balance of opinion in favor of the existence of anti-matter worlds. However, scientists are still not sure how this separation into two kinds of worlds could have come about.

At the beginning, scientists say, the universe was very small, as small as a breadbox, and matter and anti-matter were in close proximity —colliding and changing into radiation, then in turn being created (in pairs) out of radiation. What force could eventually have made them separate? Theoreticians have not yet come up with a satisfying reply.

PRECISE HAIRCUTTING
By The Most Professional Hands In The Art of Hair Design

From London to Marin

The cutting staff at the FIG LEAF, having just returned from London create their own original art work using only the finest implements as extensions of their own hands — always keeping in mind the individual's bone structure and facial features. Each of our staff members is fully trained by the finest schools in Europe. We feel that the very finest in cosmetic surgery offered today is a proper hair cut. At our salon we have four individuals offering the most advanced technology in the history of hair design. Open to you six days a week and nightly by appointment.

HAIR NEWS

The best conditioner known to man is a good haircut. Most men and women today fear the thought of going to a salon or barbershop for what seems to them as a very mechanical application of "hair-cut" —hair do.

I sympathize completely because up until a short time ago, the crimpers of America, the majority at least, were getting lost in a production line type of field.

Thanks to science, biochemistry and a few dedicated individuals this industry is becoming part of the future. With the following information I plan to change your thinking on the subject of hair and its proper care.

The first thing to consider about a haircut is the bone structure of the scalp and the shape of the individuals face. Bio Morphic Design with Geometric application. Bio Morphic meaning bone structure and Geometric meaning cutting at angles.

Most people do not realize that by cutting length off hair it will cause the hair to rise and appear to be much fuller. I'm using this as an example because you see so many people with uneven, unbalanced cuts. Remember, its not how long you wear it, its how you wear it long.

We are presently in a time where people are starting to appreciate themselves as they really are, by this I mean for men, getting away from short, oil or sprayed down hair styles and for women I see the death of the roller along with all the destructive cosmetics that go along with it.

I believe that a free flowing natural cut which will move with the individual along with only very natural cosmetics are the essential application for this time.

Thank you, John Jenkins, D.H.

TRULY WONDERFUL is a frisky 4-month-old African lioness who sometimes barks like a dog and hisses when anyone nears her sink in the utility room. Shirley Nelson, a medical receptionist and public relations woman, owns the lioness and a menagerie of other exotic animals including a 9-year-old jaguar. The lioness, who was just leash-trained, enjoys leading rather than being led, and has a definite interest in the Collies and Dobermen Pincers also owned by Miss Nelson. "She can hold her own against the dogs," she said.

EXOTIC PETS ARE HER THING

Shirley Nelson Loves Her Cats

By KAREN PETERSON

If you see a woman driving down the freeway with a large, spotted jaguar in the back of her station wagon, it's only Shirley Nelson transporting Daklia to a meeting of Exotics Unlimited.

If you don't see the jaguar, the car may be serving as transport for Truly Wonderful, her 4-month-old African lioness. Or it could contain her pair of jungle cats from Thailand, a breed related to the lynx family; or her coyote, or her raccoons.

Shirley Nelson of Sonoma County raises exotic pets like most of us raise kittens or puppies, and she is the founder and director of Exotics Unlimited, a club that has a human membership of 150 and an exotic animal membership of nearly 900.

"I've always liked cats," said Miss Nelson whose first exotic was an ocelot, "I wanted to be a veterinarian but I was unable to go to college. So I sort of took up animals."

Taking up animals for Miss Nelson has included raising and showing Persian and domestic short hair cats and Collies (which she now raises) and raising foxes, Wallabees, an anteater and a king snake. And now, beside her own two adults, she is raising two wily, three-week-old jungle cat kittens for a friend.

The tufted-eared jungle cat at full growth weighs from 25-30 pounds, one of the smaller of the exotic cats, and it ranges in color from gray to brown to reddish brown. "They're an adaptable animal," she said of the two adults that share a room with her three domestic cats, "they don't need to be declawed."

HER JAGUAR, whose name, Daklia, means "great" in an indigenous Philippine language, is a full grown, 9-year-old cat which she has owned for over eight years. Staying in his large, two-and-a-half car garage "room" during the interview, the cat gently rubbed up against Miss Nelson's face as she kneeled to pet it through the caged door.

The jaguar, which is the third largest cat after the lion and tiger, and which can weigh up to 300 pounds, is equivalent in size to a St. Bernard, Miss Nelson explained.

The declared male, Daklia, has never given her any problems, she explained, except for his playfulness.

"He used to eat houseplants," she said. "It was a game. He'd sneak up and get a bite and look around to see if I was watching. I had to be careful because some houseplants are poisonous. For a long time all I had was evergreens."

Hissing, the lioness sat in a faucetless sink in the utility room. "She's trying to do her territorial thing," said Miss Nelson, "It's her sink."

The lioness weighs about 40 pounds now and when full grown could measure just under eight feet from nose to tail-tip and weigh nearly 300 pounds.

The cats stay in the house with Miss Nelson when she's home, living only in "their rooms" when she's at work.

She strictly enforces her "no animals on the furniture" rule, and explained that disciplining the large cat is no different from training a smaller animal or child.

"YOU SET rules," she said, "and stick to them. People are too inconsistent. You don't get into explanations with animals. You get up and go over there to stop them. People quit after awhile and the animals win. I don't quit."

"After a time," she continued, "they give up. It's not good for an animal to go uncontrolled. It doesn't become a habit until it's repeated."

The lioness will move in with the male jaguar when she reaches adulthood, said Mill Nelson.

The room, she explained, is large enough and contains enough activities to keep the jaguar in good shape. "There's a 4 foot by 6 foot, 250-pound house inside," she said, "that he enjoys pushing around the room."

Mating will not be a problem, she said, but if it did occur the cubs would be a very rare animal. Already, she said, there has been cross-breeding between lions and tigers.

All the animals Miss Nelson and the other members of Exotics Unlimited own are domestic born. Miss Nelson does not believe in taking animals, especially the young, from the wild.

"Zoos can't keep unlimited numbers, and they desperately need the money. The cats, she said, will grow up and a zoo will soon have one or two pairs. They have a surplus; they can't keep the rest."

SHE FOUNDED the club a little over nine years ago primarily for exotic cat owners. But gradually, as requests came from other exotic animal owners, the club expanded. Its members who own such animals as kangaroos, wolves, leopards, mountain lions and rare birds, come from as far away as Guam, and it's the only club of its kind in the United States, she said.

The members meet once a month, often in private homes, to hear lectures and see movies from wildlife experts and travelers.

The club also gives its support to wildlife protection bills, she said, including those to save wolves and mountain lions from extinction, and those prohibiting hunting from planes and poison used for predator control.

"There's nothing sporting about shooting animals from a plane," said Miss Nelson, "It's barbaric."

"STRONGLY AGAINST buying exotic pets on whims, Miss Nelson said, "If you get an exotic animal, you have to plan to keep it indefinitely. It's not something to buy when they're little and then just get rid of."

"You can be a prisoner in your own home," she said of the demands to be met when caring for a large cat. "I don't suggest going out and getting a jaguar. See if you can afford it. Don't let it be an albatross around your neck."

Besides wanting an exotic animal, a person must be able to protect it as well as afford it, she said.

"You have to keep them properly, and have the means and facilities. If you don't have the money, you can't have a rhinoceros.

"I don't let my dogs run free, even in the country. They could be shot, run over or poisoned. Nothing happens to my animals because they are protected," she said.

And she doesn't allow indiscriminate breeding, describing the number of abandoned kittens she finds on the road near her 2,000 acre home.

"I keep my animals on my own property. It's unsafe to let them run the streets. The hazards are too numerous to mention."

"The club promotes the welfare and safety of the public and the animals," she said. "Some people are afraid of exotic pets and they have rights too."

THE RESPONSIBILITY for keeping animals is not forced on anyone, she said, in fact it's a lot freer choice. "We get our animals of our own free will, and we should take care of them. It's unfortunate that bills have to be passed to do this for us."

Miss Nelson also feels that it is much simpler to do things right the first time than to have to correct it later.

"If you take care of your pets," she said, "you have fewer problems. I've never had any complaints during my nine years in this house."

Her precautions include putting the chain on the lioness before leaving the house, and loading the jaguar in the car in the garage instead of the driveway, eliminating the possibility of either animal bolting suddenly.

FOR THOSE who are considering an exotic pet, Miss Nelson explained that the lion is an inexpensive animal to buy because of their abundance in the zoos. But, she cautioned, they're expensive to maintain. They need a big cage, declawing, and a food bill that includes up to 15 pounds of meat a day for perhaps 17 years, the expected life span of the zoo-born lion.

Her jaguar eats nine pounds of food a day, including beef, lamb, chicken and kidneys, along with vitamins and canned milk. He also gets a dozen eggs every two weeks.

The lioness now eats five pounds of chicken and beef a day plus calcium, bone meal, vitamins and milk.

Besides her firsthand knowledge of the animals, Miss Nelson keeps up with the latest developments on animal care, reading books, being a member of 10 different zoological societies, and soon she will take a course in animal biology and technology.

"Each animal has a place in the ecological system," she said. "The world would go on without man, but the animal has done some good."

Nutrition Is Big Food Buying Factor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Next to price, nutrition is the most important food-buying consideration, according to a study conducted for Hoffmann-La Roche, Inc., vitamin producers.

The research, based on panel discussions with women of widely varied ages, education and income, also indicated they believed breakfast is the most important meal and the one that most needs nutritional improvement.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Probationer's Wife Believes His Jailing Was A Bum Rap

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I'm 16 and my husband is 22, and we have two daughters, aged 20 months and three weeks.

My husband worked day and night to feed us. Every time we would get ahead, the sheriff's office would pick him up on any charges they could find. If I paid the bond, all charges would be dropped.

But this time I had no money and Herman got three years in prison for something he didn't do. He was home taking care of me, as I was pregnant and had a blood disorder.

But the judge only listened to a woman who said Herman came into her ktichen. Her story changed dates twice, and she admitted nothing was touched, even her.

Just because Herm is on probation, he gets blamed for everything. What can I do. — UNFAIR

DEAR UNFAIR:

If you can convince a lawyer at the Legal Aid Society of Herm's innocence, he may take your case. But remember, it takes more than a wife's trusting loyalty to prove a court decision wrong. — HELEN AND SUE

DEAR RAP:

My Mom does what should be a man's job. She has three kids, one a very active four-year-old. She weeds the garden, mows the lawn, paints, plants vegetables, runs a roto-tiller, repairs things, with no help except from me (the oldest), and I do just enough to keep her from yelling.

Dad is strong and healthy, but he thinks if Mom fixed something once, she can do it all the time, so he never does anything around the house, while Mom does more and more (and I'm getting more hard jobs, too).

We're pretty disgusted with Dad. What's your opinion? — ONE OF TWO OVERWORKED DEAR ONE:

My opinion (and it's admittedly pre-liberation) is that a woman this efficient deserves all the work she gets heaped on her. I never learned to start those rope-pull motors, thus the roto-tiller and our ancient lawn mower are "beyond my powers." I'm a sloppy painter, and I couldn't repair a cabinet or an electric cord on a bet. So naturally these jobs go to my husband who is absolutely sure I couldn't exist without him. On the other hand, his cooking and his cleaning ability stop at "Norwegian Salad" (a wild kind of omelet) and a vacuum job that ignores the corners. We both know we could do a great deal more if necessary — but thank heavens, it isn't necessary. Meanwhile, it's lovely being dependent on each other . . . and feeling needed in our own specialties.

Your mother may have already destroyed this delicate balance of "his and herness," but perhaps you'll learn an important lesson from watching her. Which is: let your husband know he's tremendously important — that without him the family, house and garden might fall apart — and you'll be surprised how much pride he takes in proving you right. — HELEN

OOTOP:

I'm not exactly sure I agree. There's a lot of female and male role-playing here that would make Gloria Steinem shudder. On the other hand, it's worked in our family and you can't argue with success. But . .

I'll let you in on secret, "Two." Mom can start a rope-pulley lawn mower and repair a cabinet if she has to — and dad has put out great meals and even cleaned behind the TV set when mom was on a speaking trip. They're pretty good at conning each other — in the interests of a happy marriage. And since they're both aware of it, well, maybe I'll follow in their footsteps. — SUE

Marin County Foster Homes Being Sought

Foster homes are being sought for children of various ages by the Marin County Department of Public Social Services.

The Volunteer Bureau of Marin has announced that prospective foster parents may telephone DPSS at the Civic Center for information on the children from a home-finding worker and qualifications for becoming licensed foster homes.

Some of the children have special problems, while others do not, according to the bureau. Monthly rate for care of foster children ranges from $115 to $160 a month, depending on the age of the child.

THE BEST-Dressed Barn: Get out the hay, horses and pitchforks and make room for a 1973 lifestyle. That's what Michael Wager did in remodeling this New England barn into a family dwelling. It won him a Burlington House Award for ingenuity.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

Barns Have Special Charm

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY
Distributed by General Features Syndicate

The barns of the world hold a special charm for young families looking for a place they can afford. Throughout the German and Danish countryside, these classic structures, some with thatched rooftops, are being converted into ideal living spaces. It's happening in North America, too.

There's something rare about these old farm buildings. Farmers used to lavish space on the working needs of their trade yet skimped on the family living quarters. The cows and horses had a better environment than Mom and Pop.

Naturally, some of the existing barns are more romantic looking than structurally sound. But in a recent remodeling project, Michael Wager proved a barn can be livable and his finished project won a 1973 Burlington House Award in a best-dressed houses competition.

Wager found an old New England barn big enough to house a good-size living room, dining area and kitchen on the main floor level, with space for two sleep-study rooms on the hayloft level.

THE STRUCTURE itself was in good condition, but there was no insulation against cold New England winters. The solution was a layer of polyurethane which was sprayed on surfaces between beams. The foam was then painted white, giving a good contrast to the weathered quality of the old wood.

Windows were needed to bring life into the area, and Wager found some at wrecking yards. One particularly good find was a handsome Palladian-style window, 16 feet tall, which he found leaning against a wall in a junkyard. Price? $15. It's now the focal point of the living room shown today.

How do you furnish a barn? Wager believes in mixing soft, cushiony forms with velvet fabrics, Oriental rugs and runners and lots of basketry, a tree-size plant or two and exposed wood floors.

ALL OF the new ktichen cabinets have been built to harmonize with the existing structure, since beams and posts are an integral part of the space. Again windows were added to make cooking a pleasure without the need for too much artificial light.

Daughter Alexandra's room is painted French blue, has a patterned wallpaper and bed cover, some primitive American paintings and Chinese procelain lamps —a fun mix for a fun girl.

In the dining room, Wager uses country Sheraton chairs with a fine gate-legged table, all atop an Oriental rug. And although not used in a cliche way, there is the inevitable hutch cabinet, displaying a collection of pewter and china. If you live in a barn, you've got to have a hutch.

TOTEMIC SCULPTURE — Oil-stained, lumber mill-ends are used by artist Esthermae Riley to create this abstract, archetypal figure whose open arms and asymmetrical lines shape the space they enclose. It is included in an exhibit of collages, paintings, and sculptures in a three-artist show at the Genesis Gallery in Mill Valley.

ART REVIEW

Three Works Show Sensibility, Versatility And Rich Colors

By ADA GARFINKEL

Artist Barbara Melichar combines a sophisticated sensibility with a childlike precociousness of vision.

In her exhibit of collages showing currently at the Genesis Gallery in Mill Valley, Miss Melichar creates abstract landscapes, seascapes, and special recollections that are both simple and complex.

The simplicity lies in the directness of approach; the complexity and sustained richness derive from the subtleties of her colors and from the placement of shapes and accents — as if one were looking at them from a bird's eye view.

Miss Melichar's colors are mat, tones are muted, imagery is childishly precise, and quasi-geometric. Her collage elements are cut from paper which she has hand-rolled with printer's ink colors of her own blending. Depth and volume are attained by implementing basic forms with complementary or other collaged variations.

'Collage No. 1" immediately confronts one with a surprise element. This slender, vertical format is an aerial view of a row of cypress trees which seem to be lying horizontally on their sides, as if seen from a plane turning in mid-air. A double half-circle serves as a visual path moving upward into the atmosphere.

In "Collage No. 6", the earth is a brown tapestry-like carpet in the shape of a parallelogram. A holiday sea regatta is suggested in "No. 8," while "Collage No. 9" with its telescoping fence posts and heightened color accents evokes the atmosphere of a racing field.

Miss Melichar's collages have both charm and plasticity. One does not only look at her personalized topographies; one looks into them.

Also showing their work in depth this month are Esthermae Riley and Renee Locks.

Miss Riley's versatility is demonstrated in several small wooden sculptures and in a group of nine paintings which are at opposite ends of the yin-yang polarity.

Miss Riley's paintings are loosely recorded still-lifes, animals, and nudes. Her juicy colors and the texture of the laminated torn-paper surface which she uses as her supports blend in luminous harmony under the heavily lacquered surface coating she favors. Their floating imagery lend a light, feminine air.

Her oil-stained wooden sculptures, though small in size — the tallest is barely two feet high — loom majestically and aggressively in scale and concept.

Made up of mill-ends in a variety of thicknesses and shapes — angles, wedges, channels, arcs — and an occasional straight piece to form a spine — Miss Riley's asymmetrical units counterpoints of tension and release with positive and negative shapes molding internal form and external space.

Renee Locks' Fauvist colors are richly luscious in an analogous range of full-bodied blues, purples, turquoise, and green.

A poetic landscape, several primitively simple, Symbolist-like portraits, and an "outre", primal-dreamscape are dealt with in five paintings.

"Full Moon," however, is a landscape stitchery within a 24 inch metal ring. Tight stitching in bright colors depict the brilliance of the light on a foreground flower garden against the deep blue of night and the radiating, silvery glow of the ghostly moon.

This exhibit will continue through Sept. 30 and may be seen daily from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday. The gallery is on the second floor at 2 Miller Avenue.

Three Arrested In Sale Of Hijacked Beef

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) —Three Florida men were charged yesterday with trying to sell 40,000 pounds of hijacked beef to an FBI agent.

Roger Dale Taylor, 30, of Tampa, and Charles "Faze" Faison, 29, and James William Miller, 45, both of Panama City, Fla., face penalties of up to 10 years in jail and $5,000 fine each if convicted.

The stolen beef, which had an estimated value of $65,000, was recovered, the FBI said.

FBI agent Nick F. Stames said a tractor and trailer was stolen in Nebraska and the FBI got word it was en route to Florida for sale.

An undercover agent posed as a buyer to negotiate the beef purchase and when the truckload of meat was delivered to a truck stop, all three men were arrested.

The tractor and refrigerator trailer were also recovered.

To Visit U.S.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (UPI) — New Zealand Prime Minister Norman Kirk said today he would visit the United States later this month for talks with President Nixon.

Criminals Are Blamed In Bombing

LONDON (UPI) — Police said yesterday that criminals bent on "an act of revenge" were responsible for a bomb which exploded at an East London police station, injuring three policemen.

The police said the bomb did not appear to be part of a terror campaign, blamed on the Irish Republican Army, which has turned up dozens of bombs here and abroad. The incidents included the discovery or explosion of bombs in London and Birmingham and strikes at British embassies in Washington and Paris.

The latest IRA-type bomb was found by two boys in an office doorway on the outskirts of Birmingham early today. It was defused by police after the youngsters carried it to a sandbox and called police.

Speaking of the East London attack last night, commander Peter Neivens of the West Ham district, said "After careful consideration we have come to the conclusion that this attack was carried out as an act of revenge.

"There are plenty of people around here who would wish us harm," he said. Police sources suggested that recent gangbusting operations by authorities may have stirred criminals into action.

The bomb, containing about 2 ounces of explosive, blew up in the hands of Sgt. Lawrence Roberts, 45, as he carried it from a stolen car. His life was saved because the iron pipe in which the explosive was packed pointed away from him as it exploded.

"If he had had it pointing towards him it would have blown him in half," a West Ham policeman said.

Two other policemen in the yard of the West Ham police station were slightly injured by the blast. It was the 37th bomb in 17 days in London alone. Police blamed the others on the IRA.

Another bomb was discovered in a shopping bag in Birmingham 24 hours earlier. It did not explode and army experts defused it.

'Godfather' Ban

SEOUL (UPI) —The South Korean Education Ministry yesterday banned elementary and high school students from viewing the film "The Godfather."

Labor Leaders Hit Nixon Policies

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The nation has "slipped backwards" and President Nixon's economic policies have "caused havoc," two labor leaders charged yesterday in Labor Day speeches.

George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, said that when Nixon took office unemployment was at a 15-year low, food and consumer goods were plentiful and "the dollar was strong and respected throughout the world."

"Well, workers have now been subjected to wage controls for more than two years," Meany said. "But wages, and wages alone, have been rigidly controlled. Workers, and workers alone, have been forced to sacrifice in the administration's so-called fight against inflation. In the past two years, there has been no equity, no ever-handedness in the control program."

I.W. Abel, president of the United Steelworkers of America, said that in the past five years "America has slipped backwards" with regressive social and economic policies, inflation and soaring corporate profits and interest rates.

Since Nixon became President, Meany said, "the greatest food-producing nation on earth is experiencing food shortages ... America's housing shortage has grown to crisis proportions."

In addition, the inflation rate has almost doubled and budget deficits total $66.8 billion, he said.

"So in labor's view the administration's economic policies have been and are dangerously unbalanced and thoroughly bad," Meany said. "Except in the areas of bank profits and corporate profits, they have caused havoc in every area of American life."

Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan defended the Nixon economic policies in a commencement address at the New York State Labor College in New York.

Employment has risen 3 million in the past year, unemployment has fallen to 4.7 per cent, the lowest in the three years, and average real earnings in July were up to $146.65 a week, Brennan said.

"These gains have come about under the administration of a President determined to find ways of of strengthening the economy," he said.

The advances have come about under a President "willing to brave the criticism that usually accompanies an assertion of leadership in the field of economics."

Dollar Is Fluctuating On European Markets

LONDON (UPI) —The dollar fluctuated on European money markets today and the price of gold held steady.

The dollar opened slightly higher in Brussels and Paris, began the day unchanged in value in London, but opened fractionally lower in Germany and Holland.

It closed moderately higher in Tokyo, at 265.47 to the dollar.

Gold on the big London bullion market was unchanged at $104.50.

A Frankfurt dealer said the dollar's slight up-and-down movements so far this week were caused "by still-uncertain conditions in the German domestic money market." Few European dealers found any major outside influence at work on the dollar's rate of exchange.

The dollar's opening quotation in Frankfurt today was 2.4540 marks, slightly under yesterday's close of 2.4550 marks. In Amsterdam the dollar dipped marginally to 2.6760 guilders. In Milan it opened at 565.25 lire, another slight dip from yesterday.

But in Zurich the U.S. currency began at 3.0375 Swiss francs, up from 3.0287. In Brussels the dollar was higher at 37.95 Belgian francs, and in Paris it gained to 4.378 francs for the financial dollar tourists use, and to 4.3163 for the official commercial dollar.

The opening London rate was $2.4575 to the pound.

Women Voters Opposing Tax Limitation Plan

The League of Women Voters of Central Marin is campaigning against the tax limitation initiative on the Nov. 6 statewide ballot, according to Mrs. Allen Lovejoy, league president.

She said league members believe the measure would lock specific tax rates into the state constitution, hampering local government budgeting, and that the proposed income tax refund and sales tax increase would work hardship on families with low and moderate incomes.

The league, at a recent workshop, voted to produce campaign material and work with other Marin County groups in opposing the initiative.

Three Die In Beirut Shooting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) —A Lebanese army officer and two civilians were killed in a shootout in central Beirut early yesterday, a Lebanese military statement said.

The gunfire exchange developed after the officer, in charge of a military patrol, stopped a taxicab and detained its three occupants and confiscated a pistol from one of them.

The early morning military statement identified the three as Lebanese.

'Charming Char' Award To A Man

SOUTHAMPTON, England (UPI) — Ralph Osborne, 67, the only man against 1,100 cleaning women vying for the "charming char" title, won the $62.50 prize and a golden scrubbing brush last night.

"I learned a trick or two about polishing during my 24 years in the army," said Osborne, who mops the floors at the Royal Cinque Ports Yacht club in Dover.

CITY HALL, THEN AND NOW — If the proprietor of La Fleur Millinery Parlor or Dr. A. H. Mays, who occupied second floor quarters (left photo) in 1910 were to return, they would find this building, now Sausalito City Hall (right photo) little changed on the outside. The city library now occupies the second floor, the city council chamber and city manager's offices the first floor. In 1910, city hall was housed at 62 Princess Street and this was known as the Bank Building, home of the Sausalito Bank and Overland Automobile. The white sign at left announces raffle of an auto on Oct. 29, 1910, by the Sausalito Promotion and Improvement Club to benefit the Good Road Fund.

Sausalito Boasts A Rich, Ribald And Colorful Past

The City Celebrates 80th Birthday Today

By PAUL LIBERATORE

I have a castle of silence, flanked by a lofty keep,
And across the drawbridge lieth the lovely chambers of sleep,
It's walls are draped in legends woven in threads of gold,
Legends beloved in dreamland in the tranquil days of old . . .

Sausalito poet Daniel O'Connell

Today is the birthday of the City of Sausalito. Eighty years ago, on Sept. 4, 1893, it was defined by the will of its citizens to be independently governed. But that amounts to a mere legal gesture. The soul of Sausalito always has been set apart, because there is nothing in Marin so rich in sea tale and legend, artists and writers and colorful folk, controversy and delightful confusion as Sausalito.

The history of the white man in Sausalito dates to 1826, when an itinerant Irishman named John Read applied to the Mexican government for a land grant. He was turned down, but built a shack in defiance and began a small boat ferry to San Francisco.

By 1837, the Miwok Indians were driven from their homeland on the Marin and San Francisco peninsulas, partly by fear of the white settlers and by a smallpox epidemic that killed 6,000 of them.

In 1848, Capt. William Richardson, an Englishman, appeared with his Spanish wife whom he had carried to Sausalito for their honeymoon. He decided to stay, building an adobe and raising cattle at Hurricane Gulch, named because the land forms a geographic funnel for winds that come sweeping over the headlands and into the bay like a screw.

Richardson — the bay bears his name — bailed water out of a nearby spring surrounded by saucelitos, which means little willows, and the name, although misspelled, remained. A shrewd enterpriser, Richardson sold the liquid gold to parched San Francisco, carrying it across the bay on a raft, the Water Nixie.

He persuaded whalers to spend the winter in the placid cove, a natural anchorage, and that period is soaked in stories of riotous good times, gambling and liquor and the early deaths of young seamen.

The Sausalito Land and Ferry Co. bought 1,200 acres in 1868 and, along with a ferry that ran four times daily, brought a steady hand to the waterfront.

By 1875, Chinese workmen had finished a 36-inch gauge railroad down from the north. Sausalito became the terminus and was known as "the Monte Carlo of the West," because of its gambling interests and high life.

The distinct Sausalito architecture, characterized by wood shingles, cupolas, spires and domes, is from this period.

The problem of tourists was evident even in the gay 90s and in 1894 Fourth of July celebrants became so joyous they burned down nearly half the town.

But Sausalito had its serious side and in 1906 the town was commended for noble work following the great earthquake. Refugees were housed in shacks at Hurricane Gulch.

The turn of the century was the heyday for the ferries. Races among captains were common and comparties leviedfines for captains caught racing and double fines for those who lost.

On Christmas Day in 1921, the ferry Franklin Van Damme was caught in a southeast gale and heeled over in the middle of the bay. With its rudder torn off and its whistle stuck, the deck went awash and 25 cars on board threatened to go into the sea. A lifeboat fell and crushed an auto owned by the warden of San Quentin and a fear-crazed farmer surrounded his truck with life preservers and held off desperate passengers with a shotgun. The ferry finally was towed to shore with much damage but with a minimum of injury to passengers. The vessel's sister ship, the Charles Van Damme, can be seen to this day at Gate Six.

In 1910, huge gambling sessions were common and the town had a telegraph for race results. A Chinese syndicte built a huge concrete shell for games of chance but quickly was closed down by the city. The four-level structure now is the Village Faire, home of dozens of shops.

The lure of good fishing, primarily salmon and bass, brought Italian, Portuguese and Scandinavian immigrants in the 1930s. The city still has a sizable Portuguese community and a Portuguese club on Caledonia Street, the IDESST.

Sausalito has been the home of the wealthy. Adolph Spreckels, the sugar king, lived there, as did William Randolph Hearst. It is known as the place where San Franciscans let off steam, and artists can live and work as they please.

It still has its problems, but has lost none of its color, and it may be a comfort to city fathers wrestling to determine the future character of the city that Sausalito always has been a character in the past.

THIRD SECTION SAN RAFEL, CALIFORNIA, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1973 17

Motorcyclist's Leg Is Broken

A San Jose man was injured yesterday when his three-wheel motorcycle ran over his leg on Highway 101 a mile north of the Highway 37 interchange, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Gerald L. Schwab, 25, was reported in satisfactory condition at Marin General Hospital, suffering from a broken right leg.

According to the highway patrol, Schwab was driving south at 1:15 p.m. and was trying to pass a car when he became hemmed in between two autos. He told officers he thought he hit one of the cars and was partially knocked from his cycle, the wheels rolling over his leg.

Dog Sought After Boy Is Bitten

Parents of a San Rafael boy who was bitten by a dog yesterday, today asked the dog's owner to contact them to verify the status of the dog's rabies immunization.

Adam Trupp, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Trupp of 63 Jewell Street, was bitten while riding his bicycle near San Rafael High School at 3 p.m. The dog was a large, shaggy gray and white animal, apparently an Old English sheepdog, Mrs. Trupp said.

She reported her son said that a woman among a group at the school's ballfield called out to the boy, assuring him that the dog had received rabies shots, but the Trupp family wishes verification that the immunization is current, she explained.

Old Novato Home May Be Razed

A Victorian home at Reichert and DeLong avenues, viewed as a potential visitor's information center and Novato Chamber Commerce office, may be demolished because of the cost of restoration.

City Mgr. Charles A. Brown will recommend tonight that the Novato City Council postpone action on restoration and preservation of the building, pending possible financial aid from civic organizations.

A preliminary estimate of $10,000 for restoration has doubled after a more thorough inspection of the building, Brown said.

A scheduled hearing on design of a Taco Bell restaurant in Novato Square, opposite the Novato Community House, has been continued to Sept. 11, Brown reported.

The council will meet at 8 p.m. at the Novato Community House.

Professor, Son Foil Purse Heist

Fast action by a College of Marin professor and his son ended in the arrest yesterday of a Petaluma man suspected of snatching a woman's purse and breaking her arm.

Arrested on suspicion of grand theft was Jeffrey Tim Benson, 20, of 7 Eleanor Court.

Marge Duffy, 57, of San Francisco, said she was strolling at 3:30 p.m. when a young man came up from behind her in a friendly manner and then suddenly grabbed her purse and knocked her to the ground. She was treated at Hillcrest Hospital for a broken right arm and knee cuts.

Nearby residents heard the woman scream and Dr. William Scalapino of 905 D Street, professor of psychology at College of Marin, and his son, Stephen, chased the suspect, caught him on D Street and Grossland Way, and held him until police arrived.

Benson was booked into city jail and scheduled for arraignment today in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court.

Man Found Dead At His Home

Ira Carrier, 63, a 30-year resident of Marin City, was found dead yesterday afternoon at his home at 8 Cole Drive.

According to Marin County Coroner's deputies, a neighbor found Carrier in the bathroom with his head in a tub of water.

The coroner's office would not comment on the cause of death pending further investigation.

A native of Lake Charles, La., Cole came to Marin City in 1943 and worked first in the shipyards in Sausalito. He later did carpentry work and belonged to Carpenter's Union Local No. 35 in San Rafael.

He attended Star of the Sea Catholic Church in Sausalito.

Survivors include two sons, Shelton and Wilton Carrier, both of Lake Charles; two brothers, Rogers Carrier of Oakland, and Russell Carrier of Beaumont, Tex., and four sisters, Nooney Gray, Amy Simien, Eula Johnson and Elora Burke, all of Lake Charles.

Funeral arrangements are pending at Russell and Gooch Funeral Home in Mill Valley.

Youth Hurt In Auto Accident

A 16-year-old Mill Valley youth was reported in satisfactory condition today in Marin General Hospital following an accident last night on San Pedro Road in San Rafael.

Henry G. Helbig of 60 Keats Drive suffered a cut scalp, bruises and a head injury following the accident at 11:40 p.m., according to hospital spokesmen.

San Rafael police said a car driven by Helbig was traveling westbound at a high rate of speed when it went out of control near Bayview Drive, skidded into a concrete median divider, flipped, and continued to skid on its top.

Police said Helbig was pinned in the overturned vehicle.

Oakland Man, 20, Is Convicted Of Burglary

An Oakland man in whose pocket was found a very special dollar bill has been convicted of burglary, but a Marin Superior Court Jury was unable to decide on a codefendant's guilt.

Jurors deliberated one day before convicting Richard Anthony Weaver, 20, of burglarizing the William Ambrose home in Los Ranchitos June 21.

But the panel was hung on whether John Robert Prater, 35, also of Oakland, was guilty. A new trial date was to be set today.

Ambrose testified that a discolored $1 bill once given him by a business partner was the same one found in Weaver's pocket when he and Prater were arrested.

A third man, Earl Frank Weaver, identified as the convicted man's brother, escaped with more than $20,000 loot from Ambrose's house and is being sought.

Judge David Menary Jr. presided over the five-day trial which ended Friday and set sentencing for Sept. 24.

Developer Slapped With A New Lawsuit

Another lawsuit blaming Larkspur's largest developer for the settling and cracking of homes in the Greenbrae Marina has been filed in Marin Superior Court.

The suit filed by two families blames the late Neils Schultz Sr., his son, Neils Jr., and two development companies for damages to their houses and asks $200,000.

The action by Jack T. and June S. Guerin, of 437 Riviera Circle, and John C. and Olga K. Hemingway, whose address is unknown, is the fifth such suit.

The Guerins and Hemingways claim the Schultzes knew the land on which their homes was built was unstable, but developed the property anyway.

Cracks have developed in driveways, patios, walls and floors of the houses, endangering their stability, the suit claims.

More than a dozen other homeowners have sued the developer for a total of $1,685,000, claiming similar damages to their homes.

19-Year-Old Exonerated In Theft

A lie detector test has led to the exoneration of a Mill Valley man charged with stealing a $465 camera and attachments in March.

Charges of grand theft were dropped Friday against Jeffrey Robert Fohlen, 19, at the request of the Marin County District Attorney's office, which said Fohlen had been accused mistakenly.

Depty Dist. Atty. Joshua W. Thomas said a lie detector test showed Fohlen told the truth in denying taking the photo equipment from Robert L. Scharoun of Sausalito.

Fohlen had maintained he was on duty at a Mill Valley service station the night a man went to Scharoun's house in response to an ad offering the camera for sale, then ran off with the camera.

Novatan To Lead Kelso, Wash, Police

Lt. Lynn T. Stoutt of the Novato Police Department has been selected to become chief of the police department in Kelso, Wash., effective Sept. 17.

Stoutt, 34, who has been serving as lieutenant in charge of services and administration, has resigned from his Novato post effective Sept. 15.

He has been with the Novato department for five years, three months.

Stoutt said he was selected by a Civil Service Commission from a field of about 30 candidates after written and oral examinations. He will head a 22-man police force.

Stoutt, one of the department members who filed allegations of professional misconduct against former Police Chief Allen V. Klemme, said he was "happy" with his appointment as chief in Kelso.

Boating Safety Course Offered

A free 12-lesson course on boating safety will begin Sept. 11 at San Clemente School in Corte Madera under the sponsorship of the Central Marin Flotilla 85, Coast Guard Auxiliary.

The lessons will be given Tuesday and Thursday nights through Oct. 23 and will deal with such subjects as marine engines, charts and compass, boat handling, sailboats and weather.

Interested persons may contact Kenneth T. Anderson of 42 Corte Solano, Greenbrae, for additional information.

Auto Is Stolen

A 1964 blue Volkswagen, license number D6N634, was taken from a dirt lot near 36 Belvedere Street, San Rafael, sometime yesterday, police reported today. The car is owned by the D&R Volkswagen Porsche Repair at 36 Belvedere Street, police said.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

WHAT FAMOUS American editor was born this month? Of all the great people born in September, none was more colorful and energetic. See if you can guess his name from the following biography.

THIS MYSTERY celebrity came to the United States from Scotland at 24, seeking his fortune as a school teacher, then reporter and editor. Success did not come early or easily for this man. When it did, it was spectacular.

EARLY YEARS found him struggling. He tried teaching, then gave it up. Then he worked for a time as a Washington correspondent. But at the age of 40 he found himself out of work. His prospects for employment were poor because too many people thought he was crafty and politically untrustworthy.

TAKING his life's savings out of a bank, a total of $500, he started his own newspaper. He called it the "Morning Herald," sold it for one penny a copy. People liked the bright, witty, lively writing. His office was in a basement.

THE HERALD grew in popularity. But misfortune struck when his printing plant burned down. Again he had to invest everything on new printing equipment. But when the new "Herald" came out 19 days later it had a lot of new ideas.

ALWAYS a fighting editor, he believed in telling the truth as he saw it. Other angry publishers called him "a common bandit" or a "turkey buzzard." One editor met him on the street, knocked him down and beat him with a cane. Yet when he died at the age of 76, he had built one of the greatest newspapers the city of New York had evern seen. Historians call him a giant of journalism.

WHAT'S HIS NAME? Let's salute James Gordon Bennett, born on Sept. 1, 1795, near Keith, Banffshire, Scotland. He deid in New York City on June 1, 1872.

South Must Employ A Good Technique To Pull Off Victory

The expert takes completely for granted certain plays that look like wizardry to the average player. The difference is clear in a hand that was mangled recently in a sociable game.

EAST'S DECEPTION

South won the first trick with the king of hearts and led a low diamond to dummy's queen. He returned a low diamond from dummy, and East deceptively played the jack.

South covered with the king of diamonds, and West naturally took the ace. West led the jack of hearts, and South blundered by taking the ace. He could have survived his earlier mistakes but this one was fatal.

When South now led another diamond, East won with the ten and still had a heart to return to his partner. West took three heart tricks, defeating the contract.

SOUTH CORRECT

South was correct (and lucky) when he led a low diamond to dummy's queen. On the next trick, however, South could not gain by playing his king. If West had the ace-ten, the defenders were sure to get two diamond tricks no matter what South did. If West had the blank ace, however, South could limit the loss to one trick by playing a low diamond and saving his king for the next diamond trick.

Even after making the wrong play in diamonds, South could have saved his bacon by refusing one heart trick. He would take the third heart and give up a diamond. East would be out of hearts and would have to lead clubs or spades. Either way, South would then be able to run nine tricks: one spade, two hearts, three diamonds and three clubs.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass.

The hand is not a sound opening bid but you would be willing to shade a point or so if you had a good suit. Why bid without a hand and without a suit?

Larkspur's Manager On Carpet

Larkspur City Mgr. Kent B. Bathurst apparently will be on the carpet tomorrow during a closed personnel session at the regular Larkspur City Council meeting.

Bathurst today told the Independent-Journal that he hadn't been consulted about the closed session on the agenda, but that apparently it will involve "hiring or firing the city manager.

"It's a carryover from a couple of months ago," he said.

Bathurst announced June 28 that he plans to resign next March from his $22,600 post to enter private business.

He had been under fire from Councilman Neil R. Brixon and others for the past 11 months, beginning with a council investigation of charges that Bathurst and aides failed to stop excavation work being done on Little King Mountain without a permit.

Brixon also has declared that Assistant City Mgr. Harlan Barry was "doing most of" Bathurst's work.

Despite the criticisms, Bathurst was given a raise in May.

The closed session is the final item on a lengthy agenda for Wednesday's meeting which will begin at 8 p.m. in the council chamber.

Also on the agenda are introduction of ordinances for licensing bicycles, requiring removal of junked cars from private property, and a public hearing on establishing hillside development regulations.

Russian Critics Are Denounced

MOSCOW (UPI) — Twenty-one members of the Soviet Academy of Fine Arts denounced novelist Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn and nuclear physicist Andrei D. Sakharov in a letter published today in the Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda.

Soviet newspapers have been running letters for the past week condemning the two men for their recent criticism of the Soviet system.

Much Auto Upkeep Said A Waste

By CHARLES E. DOLE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Motorists are wasting millions of dollars a year on needless maintenance of their new cars.

That's the way American Morors' George E. Brown sees it. As general service manager for the rebounding auto manufacturer, he suggests that new-car buyers study the owner's manual, including the section on upkeep, and follow it.

Too often the manual remains in the glove box and rarely sees the light of day.

Rather than a mystery novel that taxes the motorist's ability to decipher, the owner's manual generally gives solid, explicit information on what the modern automobile is all about. It could be worth the reading.

Guided by habit, too many motorists are paying for unnecessary oil changes, chassis lubrications, and even tune-ups based on the cycle required for cars many years ago.

The American Motors owners' manual, for instance, calls for a major tune-up every 15,000 miles. Yet some motorists fall for the ploy that if one tune-up every 15,000 miles is good, two are better. This is not true, declares Brown.

"They simply don't have to change the oil, lubricate, and tune the engine so often," he adds, "and it's a waste of money to do so."

With all the talk about a major mechanic shortage in the car industry, "if you can stop the work that just isn't needed, then maybe there would be a mechanic surplus," he suggests.

The servicing cycle called for by the manufacturer is vital, however, and a motorist should follow it.

Mileage, for example, can suffer drastically if the antipollution equipment on cars is not properly serviced according to the recommended practice. A car that might normally get 10 miles to a gallon of fuel — and this is common in city-type driving these days — could drop to eight or fewer if the emissions-control add-ons are allowed to malfunction. Also, they do not perform their duty and emissions out the tailpipe can soar.

Between major tune-ups a car might require some adjustment, but not a $60 job, says Brown. "In 20 minutes a mechanic can improve the pep and economy of a car as well as cut the pollution — and it shouldn't cost over $5. All the mechanic has to do is adjust the idle speed and mixture, timing, and point dwell.

"But everyone wants to sell a tune-up," he complains.

Millions of cars roll into new-car dealerships and roadside service stations each year for a front-end alignment — a good value when needed because it will reduce tire wear, improve handling, and give a better ride.

"Yet," adds Brown, "more than half the time that people buy a front-end job, only the toe-in needs adjustment. To toe-in can be easily checked with a scuff plate for $5 compared to perhaps $15 or more for a full alignment job.

"Why not save the money and the mechanic's time?" he asks.

What about the periodic rotation of the tires on a car? "That's another waste," declares Brown. "It takes at least $10 to rotate and balance all four tires. If this is done every 5,000 miles, then you'll spend $40 in 20,000 miles. For $40 or less you can buy a new tire."

Bill Roberts, assistance service manager for Atamian Ford, Boston, takes a different tack. "The front end of a new car is not as stable as it used to be. Tires should be rotated, we say.

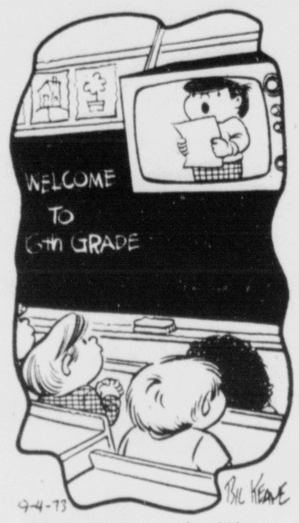

"If you don't have the double-belted steel radial tires on a car, you can wear the tires out pretty fast. We have a new 'demo' here. At 20,000 miles we're on the second set of front tires, and it's been aligned twice."

WASTED MONEY — Much of the money American motorists spend on auto maintenance each year is just wasted, says an official of American Motors. Needless tune-ups, oil changes and lube jobs, he says, are just money down the drain. (Christian Science Monitor Photo)

Call Made To Close Radio Free Europe

MOSCOW (UPI) —The government newspaper Izvestia called on the United States yesterday to close down Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, saying their activity is hampering the improvement of relations between the two countries.

Izvestia cited as evidence of U.S. interference in Soviet internal affairs Radio Liberty broadcasts of statements by dissidents such as novelist Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn and nuclear physicist Andrei D. Sakharov.

"This radio station of late has been spreading with particular zeal fabrications of all kinds of moral freaks," Izvestia said.

The program, entitled "Crisis '73" also will include a filmed interview with Ellsberg. Admission will be charged.

Stockholm Police Upset Over Printing Of Bank Vault Photo

STOCKHOLM (UPI) —A bitter internal quarrel within the police department was reported yesterday over the publication of an exclusive photograph showing a convict and three weary hostages in a besieged Stockholm bank vault.

A police spokesman said officers involved in the successful operation to free the hostages last month were "upset" over the release of the photograph.

It was taken by a policeman who lowered a camera into the vault from the roof and was published by the West German magazine Bild Am Sonntag Sunday.

The spokesman said the policeman signed a written agreement not to release the photograph to newsmen.

The bank drama involved a gunman, Jan-Erik Olsson, who seized four hostages and won the release from prison of convicted benk robber Clark Olofsson. All six were holed up in the bank vault.

The photo was taken before the five-day ordeal ended with the capture of the gunman and the convict in a storm of tear gas.

It shows Olofsson standing and three hostages, two of them women, seated near safety deposit boxes with nooses dangling over the heads.

The gunman reportedly threatened to put the hostages in nooses so that they would strangle if sleep-inducing gas was pumped into the vault.

Indiana Prison Takeover Ends As Hostages Freed

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. (UPI) —Rebellious inmates at Indiana State Prison freed three guards unharmed last night and prison officials reported shortly afterward the two-day takeover had ended.

The inmates, who held the guards captive in three of five cellblocks at the 24-acre prison site, released the hostages after they were promised complete amnesty from any charges growing out of the two-day takeover.

Robert L. DeBard, executive assistant to Gov. Otis Bowen, said prison officials were in full control of the 1,800-man structure, and prisoners were being fed, identified and returned to the proper cell.

"The prison was secured at 9:30 p.m. EDT," DeBard said, "but the long task remains of identifying prisoners and putting them back into cellblocks.. We have been promised complete cooperation by the inmates."

DeBard said Bowen would make a statement today.

A break in the stalemate came after a two-hour negotiating session inside the prison with inmates from cellblock A. Prison warden Russell Lash, Indiana Commissioner of Corrections Robert Heyne, and DeBard were among those attending the session.

Lash told newsmen prison officials had only two choices: "One is to break the door down to the cellhouse and go in with state police and National Guard units and have another Attica-type situation," he said.

Instead, Lash said, "We'll wait."

Shortly after the crucial negotiating session, all three guards were led out of cellblocks A, C and D. Two of them, Arthur Jaques, 54, a diabetic and Donald W. Schultz, a widower with five children, stopped to tell newsmen they were in good shape.

"They promised they would not hurt me and they haven't done it," Jaques said. "They've taken good care of me and brought me everything I needed. They did just like they said. They made sure I got my medicine and I feel good."

Prison officials blamed the takeover on a gang fight over a bottle of homebrewed alcohol. A group of at least 200 convicts tried to seize a security post as they returned from chapel Sunday.

But Wayne Webb, an inmate spokesman serving 20 years for robbery, said the rebellion was sparked a number anumber of things, including poor wages, poor medical services, and isolation procedures. In all, the prisoners issued a list of 25 demands.

"We feel that if these demands are not at least given some attention by the prisoner and correction authorities, we cannot make predictions on actions in the future," Webb said.

The three cellblocks involved housed about 900 of the maximum security institution's prisoners. Officials said they had no idea how many were involved in the takeover or minor destruction of property that occurred.

Several windows were broken, but there were no fires or injuries.

Bowen said after the three guards were released last night, "I regret the inmates felt this action had to be taken, but I would commend them for remaining calm throughout the incident.

"I think it's important to note that several of the points of confrontation they raised including medical services, dining hall facilities and ombudsmen already were in the process of being implemented by the state administration."

Australian Police Say Hijack Action Was All A Big Mistake

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Fifty police cars lined the runway. Sharpshooters were posted around the tarmac. A fleet of ambulances stood ready in case of trouble.

Five young immigrants walked unsuspectingly down the exit ramp of a British Overseas Airways Corp. (BOAC) jumbo jet early today into the hands of Australian police.

Authorities questioned the three young men and two women as hijack suspects for two hours and then released them, admitting it was all a big mistake.

The mixup began when the big Boeing 747 with 200 persons aboard set down at Australia's Darwin airport for a refueling stop during the flight from London to Sydney.

Airport officials said the five teenagers, who were immigrating to Australia, "acted suspiciously" during the Darwin stopover. The officials first described the suspects as Arabs, but later identified them as non-Arab Iranians.

Sydney, Brisbane and Melbourne airports went on a full hijack alert after the plane left Darwin and all police in the Sydney metropolitan area were ordered to the airport.

Mrs. Elizabeth Vladica, the mother of two of the boys and aunt of a third, expressed amazement when told the youngsters were suspected of hijacking.

"I could not believe my ears when I was told about them," she told newsmen at the airport.

She said her sons, Phillip, 11, and Nevin, 15, were immigrating to Australia with their 18-year-old cousin, Teddy Nazloomian.

"They stripped us and asked us so many questions," Nevin said after being freed. "Police asked us why we came to Australia, what we were going to do here and would we take off our clothes."

Authorities refused to go into details about the youngsters' supposedly suspicious acts and declined to release the names of the two young women.

End To Tax Deductions For Medical Bills Eyed

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Nixon administration is considering a plan to eliminate medical deductions from income tax returns to offset costs of a national health insurance program, The New York Times reported today.

In an interview with The Times, Stuart H. Altman, Health, Education and Welfare deputy assistant secretary for planning and evaluation, said no final decision has been made. In addition to eliminating medical deductions for individuals, the proposal also calls for treating health insurance premiums paid by employers for employes as taxable income for the employe, Altman said.

The plan would raise an estimated $7.5 billion a year which would at least partially and possibly completely cover the costs of the administration's health insurance program, The Times said.

"National health insurance will not be free—somewhere in the system someone is going to have to pay," The Times quoted Altman as saying.

The Times said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., made available a copy of the draft proposal dated Aug. 22 and prepared for Caspar W. Weinberger, secretary of HEW.

Kennedy has been a critic of the original Nixon health plan which was submitted to Congress 28 months ago and has contended the administration has been slow on introducing a new plan.

Kennedy's own health care plan would be financed by employer and employe contributions, much like Social Security, and federal taxes. The administration says it would be too costly.

The administration's new proposal would set a minimum level of coverage for all Americans, The Times said. The old plan had been criticized as "two-tier medicine" with lesser benefits for the poor.

Weinberger's Exchange Plan

MOSCOW (UPI) — Caspar W. Weinberger, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said he hopes to widen Soviet-American student exchanges to include high school pupils.

"One thing I hope to look into while I am here is to facilitate the exchange of secondary school pupils between our two countries," Weinberger said yesterday in a speech to members of the Soviet Medical Academy of Sciences.

Weinberger arrived Friday on a nine-day official visit.

Welfare Funds Will Continue

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Federal welfare assistance will continue to be given to needy families even if the father is temporarily absent from home on military duty or job-hunting, the government said yesterday.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare issued a proposed regulation, reflecting a recent Supreme Court decision, which would define "continued absence" of a parent from home for purposes of providing aid to families with dependent children. The absence may affect welfare eligibility.

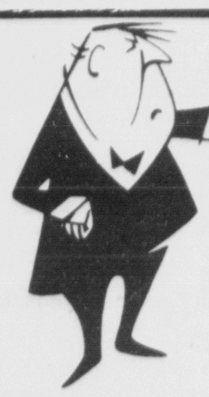

However, the regulations stated that it would not be considered a "continued absence" when a parent is away from home temporarily in connection with current or prospective employment, or on military duty.

The Giants Are Far From Dead

Just when the disgruntled fan is ready to bury the Giants and their chances for a 1973 championship they come up with a Hollywood style victory to bring new optimism to that fan.

Last night's dramatic 11-8 thumper over the hated Dodgers of the South is a very good case in point. And many of the fortunate 15,279 spectators who were at Candlestick for the game will be going back for more.

Just when you want to say the San Francisco fan has forgotten the Giants in favor of the 49ers, a record 44,265 turn up at Candlestick to root for the Giants. That Saturday crowd was also treated to a comeback victory, 5-4 over the Atlanta Braves. And although that huge turnout didn't get a chance to see Hank Aaron, sitting out a day game following a night game, many of them will be back for more.

AFTER THAT three-game sweep of the Braves and last night's win over the Dodgers, the Giants are now trailing the Reds and Dodgers by only five games and, suddenly, are in the divisional race. They were given up for dead just a few days ago but the Young Giants — and you, too, Don McMahon — are proving to be a spunky bunch which doesn't give up. They want to win that title despite having one of the shakiest pitching staffs in all of baseball.

I couldn't get out to Candlestick yesterday because I had a prior commitment which called for a can of paint, a brush and my bathroom. But I was able to get the painting done in time to watch the game on television.

I must admit I had a compelling desire to turn off the TV set in the fifth inning when the Dodgers scored five times to take an 8-1 lead. Then in the sixth inning, guest commentator Chuck Connors of Rifleman fame asked announcers Curt Gowdy and Tony Kubek what they did when they had to work a game which had turned into an 8-1 bore. Myself, I thought it was more fun spreading paint on a bathroom wall.

I WAS JUST comtemplating going out to the garage to find my paintbrush when the seventh inning fireworks started. Those Giants were hitting the ball all around the park and running from base to base and all of a sudden the 8-1 rout turned into an 8-7 thriller.

Then came the ninth inning and the bases were loaded and the best baseball player in the country was at the plate. Bobby Bonds took a mighty swing at the first pitch thrown by Dodger reliever Jim Brewer, and missed. Bonds took the second pitch for a ball and then took a mighty swing at the next one. This time he didn't miss. His grand slam made it a bitter night for the Dodgers, but a lovely one for the Giants.

CONNORS, an ex-ballplayer himself, was the first to admit he goofed when he hinted strongly that it was hard to stay awake during the game. A laugher had turned very quickly into a thriller and Connors was left with egg on his face. I was left with paint on my hands.

So, you think baseball is a boring game? Then you didn't see the one last night. Or maybe you turned off the set a little too soon.

Ryan Views Chances For 'Cy Young'

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Nolan Ryan is no dreamer.

The only way he made the American League All-Star team this year was after both squads were allowed to add an extra player.

Still, some say he should be considered a candidate for pitching's highest honor this year, the Cy Young Award.

Ryan certainly pitched well last night, enough to deserve the praise Monday night, giving the California Angels a 3-1 victory over the division-leading Oakland A's with a three-hitter.

In doing so, he struck out 12 and set two American League strikeout records.

He broke his own mark by striking out 10 or more batters in a game for the 19th time and also registered his 655th strikeout over the last two seasons, bettering Rube Wadell's 650 in 1903-04.

But there is a good reason for Ryan to be humble—at least for now.

"The only way I have a way to win the Cy Young Award is to win 20," the fast-balling right-hander said, "and that would be a distant shot because there are too many guys with outstanding records. I'll try to get above .500 first."

Ryan is only 16-16 for the season.

California scored in the second inning on doubles by Bob Oliver and Lee Stanton and in the seventh on Sandy Alomar's double, after Ken Berry singled, and Vada Pinson's sacrifice fly.

John Odom, who began the season with a 15-4 lifetime margin over the Angels, suffered his fourth loss in 15 decisions.

Bonds Hopes His Magic Rubs Off

Slam Lifts Giants Past Dodgers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Bobby Bonds is having a "miracle" season, the kind most ballplayers dream about, and now he's hoping some of the magic will rub off on his San Francisco Giants teammates.

Last night on national television, Bonds put on a show guaranteed to earn him votes for the National League Most Valuable Player award but more importantly, he helped rally the Giants to an 11-8 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers and revived their pennant hopes.

Down by 9 ½ games as recently as Aug 14, the Giants now are five behind the Dodgers and Cincinnati, who share the NL West lead with 83-55 records. The Giants are 77-59

Bonds, who scored a key run in a six-run seventh inning rally that put the Giants within a run after they trailed 8-1, broke up the game with a grand-slam homer off Jim Brewer in the ninth.

It was Bonds' 37th homer and game him 90 runs batted in along with a .302 batting average, 114 runs scored and 38 stolen bases, certainly impressive credentials for MVP honors.

"I don't honestly care about any individual records," said Bonds. "All I'm interested in is our winning the division first and the pennant later. Sure, I'd be honored by any awards I get but winning the pennant is something no one ever forgets."

Willie Crawford drove in four runs with a homer and triple and Bill Buckner had three RBIs with a homer and two singles to give Tommy John an 8-1 lead going into the seventh. Up to then, the only damaging blow John gave up was Willie McCovey's 24th homer in the fourth.

But in the seventh, Gary Matthews and McCovey singled and Chris Speier's ground-rule double scored Matthews. John struck out the next two batters before Dave Rader singled to score McCovey and Speier and pinch-hitter Steve Ontiveros also singled.

That brought on Pete Richert and Bonds greeted him with a ground rule double scoring Rader and sending Ontiveros to third. Dave Lopes took Tito Fuentes' grounder to second on the run as Ontiveros scored. But while the off-balance Lopes held the ball, Bonds kept on going and beat his wide throw to leave the Giants short only a run.

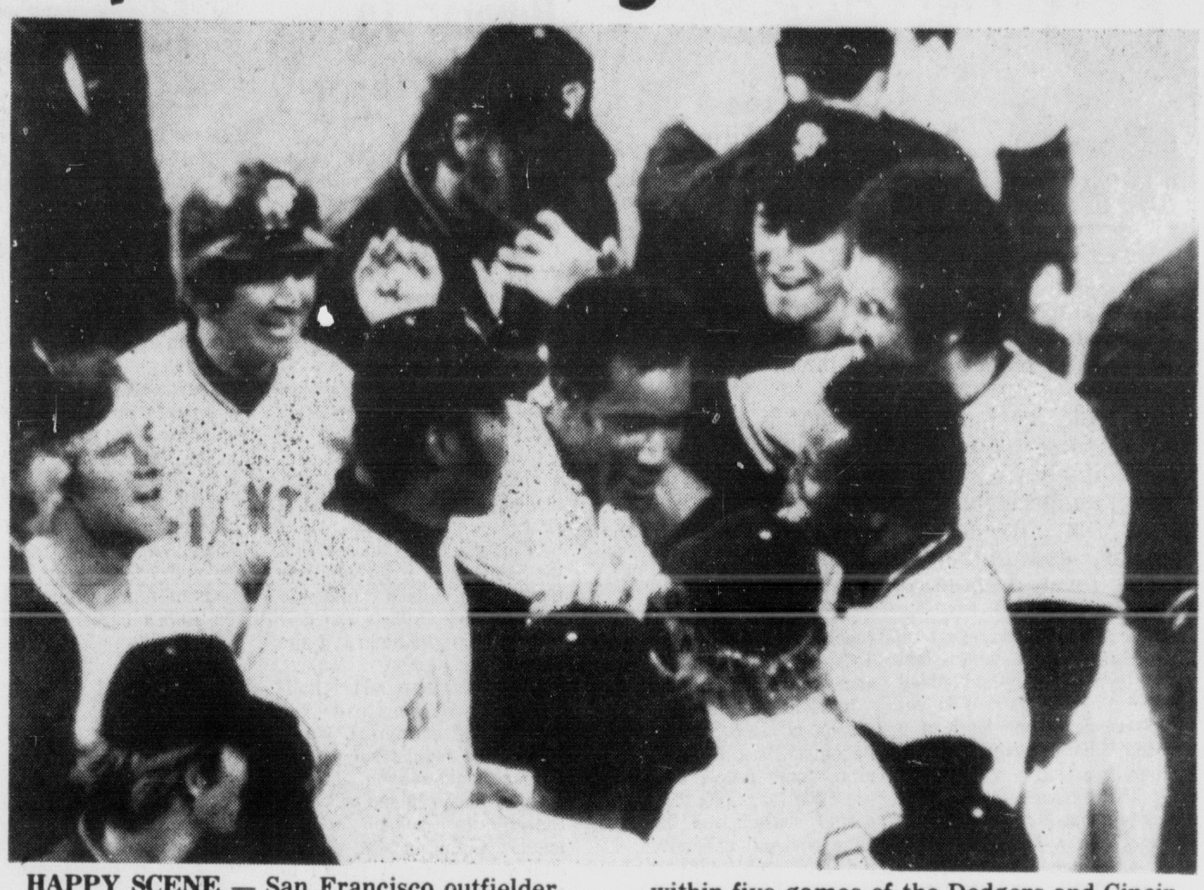

A walk and two fielder's choices on bunts loaded the bases in the ninth and Brewer replaced Richert. Bonds then homered to break up the game. for Brewer, earlier in the year the Dodgers' most reliable reliever, it was the third homer he has given up in his last four appearances.

Walter Alston, the Dodger manager, was thoroughly upset by the turn of events.

"I've never seen anything like that," he said.

Al Downing pitches for Los Angeles tonight against Ron Bryant.

See Giants' box score on inside page.

HAPPY SCENE — San Francisco outfielder Bobby Bonds (center, cap off) was mobbed by jubilant teammates last night after hitting a grand slam home run in the ninth inning to give the Giants an 11-8 victory over Los Angeles at Candlestick Park and move them within five games of the Dodgers and Cincinnati in the National League West. First to clasp Bonds' hand were (clockwise from Bonds) Tito Fuentes, Chris Speier, Gary Matthews and Willie McCovey.

Hencken Sets Mark In Belgrade Swim

BELGRADE (UPI) — John Hencken set a world 100 meters breastroke record today to lead every American swimmer safely through to the first day's finals of the World Swimming Championships.

Hencken of Santa Clara, Calif., swimming next to Japan's Nobutaka Taguchi, who held the world mark of 1:04.94 minutes set at the Olympics, touched home in 1:04.35.

"Is that a good enough start for you, coach?" asked Hencken as he got out of the pool to be congratulated by U.S. coach Gus Stager.

Stager said the U.S. performance was "just great."

"We did what we said we would do. We got every single swimmer through to the finals today," said Stager.

The finals of the mens 200 meter freestyle, 100 meter breastroke and backstroke and the womens 200 meter individual medley and 4 x 100 medley relay were scheduled to begin later in the day.

Hencken added the 100 meter mark to the 200 meter breastroke world record he set two weeks ago in Louisville, Ky.

The opening swimming heats of the championships also showed the strength of East Germany, paced by world record holders Roland Matthes in the men's backstroke and Kornelia Ender in the individual women's medley.

Miss Ender clocked a slower time than teammate Andrea Hubner in the 200 meters medley but was never pressed in her heat.

The Australian team had a poor start. Mike Wenden managed only third place with a slow time in the 200 meters freestyle, Gail Neall got badly left behind in her heat with Miss Ender, Mike Creswick never got going in the 100 meters breastroke and Brad Cooper was well out of the top eight qualifiers in the 100 meters backstroke.

Only Stephen Badger in the 200 meters freestyle and the 4 x 100 meters medley team qualified for the finals and neither looked fast enough to worry the favorites in the event.

Starters Play More For Raiders

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Raiders have been playing more starters longer in exhibition games this year to prepare for a "vicious" opening schedule of league games, says managing general partner Al Davis.

"In the past, we've never had what we considered a vicious opening schedule," he said. "This year, with our first three games against Minnesota, Miami and Kansas City, we do. We're going with more starters longer in preseason games than we ever have because of the schedule."

The Raiders yesterday moved their training camp here from Santa Rosa and placed eight players on waivers to meet the National Football League's 44-man limit. The players' names were not released.

The Raiders will make their final cuts next Monday to bring the team down to 40 active players and a seven-man taxi squad.

MOSCOW TRIP

Swimmer Cookie's Many Recollections

By LEW CODDINGTON

If you are planning a trip to the Soviet Union anytime soon, here is the advice offered by Cookie Arrighi of San Rafael, who has been there:

"Don't stay longer than a week," she says, "and bring some peanut butter."

Cookie, a swimmer who qualified in the 200-meter individual medley, was in Moscow Aug. 10-26 for the World University Games, and insists it was an "exciting and educational" journey, although "I don't think I want to go back."

It would have been a much better, trip, she says, if she hadn't been ambushed by her dinner plate. An illness resulting from a bizarre diet caused her to be scratched from the finals of the 200 I.M. after she qualified with a time of 2:30.2.

"In the cafeteria (at Moscow State Univeristy, where the competing nations' athletes stayed), they served things like boiled goat meat, liver and tongue, plus rice and potatoes" — not the ideal fare for swimmers in training.

And while goodies from home like cola and sandwich cookies showed up one instant (to be devoured the next by the culture-shocked U.S. athletes), mainly "we lived on rolls and butter," Cookie said. She lost 12 pounds.

About the only benefit of the illness was that it took her mind off the possibility that her room was being bugged. "I personally didn't go looking," she said, "but there were rumors."

An American fencer named Scott found a mysterious-looking device in his radio with the German word for "surprise" written on it, she said, and assistant swim coach Don Easterling returned to his room unexpectedly to find two light-fixture repairmen working on a lamp which had nothing wrong with it. A small black device later was found in the lamp.

Another problem concerned facilities. Although Moscow has "at least 20 50-meter pools," the U.S. team went several days without finding one to practice in, and didn't work in the competition pool until "a couple of days" before the events began.

Yes, it was "exciting and educational." But was it fun?

If often was, Cookie said. For one thing, Russian fans "treated all athletes like royalty," which sometimes meant ogling at the Americans on the street, but also meant warmth and genuine enthusiasm.

For another thing, Cookie enjoyed Moscow, "a beautiful city" with huge parks and no pollution or traffic problems

Widnall Leader In Regatta

On the strength of victories in the first two races, Bill Widnall of Marblehead, Mass., held a substantial lead entering today's competition in the International One-Design Regatta on San Francisco Bay.

The regatta, hosted by the San Francisco Yacht Club of Belvedere, is a best-five-of-six affair scheduled to end Saturday.

Widnall, the defending champion, added a victory yesterday to his triumph Sunday and now has 1½ points under the Olympic reverse-scoring system.

Jake Wosser of Tiburon, sailing for the hosts, was second in both races and has four points. The veteran of three decades of sailing said yesterday's 25-knot winds and turbulent waters were the worst he had ever encountered on the Bay. The

Selecting Wins San Joaquin Race

SAN MATEO, Calif. (UPI)— Selecting won the $25,000-added San Joaquin Handicap Monday as Bay Meadows opened its 81-day thoroughbred racing season.

Selecting was close up to the early pace, moving up to take command entering the stretch and then holding off Imaginative and Partner's Hope by a length.

'I Didn't Order Spitball'—Martin

DETROIT (UPI) — Billy Martin, fired as manager of the Detroit Tigers on Sunday, said today he "did not order" the illegal pitches which precipitated the loss of his job.

The controversial former Detroit manager also said he didn't know if he ever wanted to manage again and was going to take a few days off to think over his future.

"I didn't order it," Martin said of the spitballs thrown by Joe Coleman and Fred Sherman last Thursday in a game which triggered a turbulent weekend, ultimately leading to the dismissal of Martin with a year to go on a contract estimated at $65,000 per year.

Martin said at the time he ordered the illegal pitches thrown to show up alleged greaseball artist Gaylord Perry of Cleveland, who was in the process of pitching a six-hit, 3-0, victory over Detroit.

American League president Joe Cronin suspended the Detroit manager for three days solely on the basis of published reports of the game, acccording to Martin.

"I had to stand up for them," Martin said. "What they were doing was so obvious and if they had admitted it, they would have been suspended."

"Cronin never really talked to me," he said. "I guess they suspended me just on what they read. "The pitches they threw were legal. They were off the mound and you can go to your mouth off the mound. It was very legal," Martin said. "What he (Perry) was doing was against the rules."

General Manager Jim Campbell of Detroit, clearly distressed over the incident at the time, made up his mind Sunday morning to release Martin and said the spitball affair and subsequent suspension was a "contributing factor but not the sole reason."

"I have no comment," Martin said, earlier in a conversation. "He (Campbell) did what he thought was right, and I did what I know is right."

The hot-headed Martin lost his other major league managerial job at Minnesota in 1969 "for the good of the organization," the basic reason Campbell cited for the firing.

Clashes with front-office officials of the Twins precipitated their firing of him despite winning a divisional title in his only season. While Martin did nothing as severe as punching a member of the organization as he did to Howard Fox of Minnesota, his battles with Tiger officials and baseball officials contributed to the firing.

Antagonism between Martin and Cronin was well known as was his feelings toward Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. Martin fought continually with umpires and was in trouble almost constantly with the Detroit front-office.

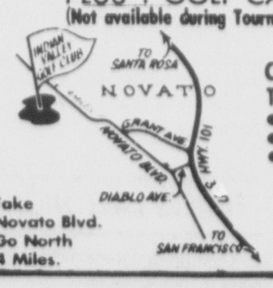

He said he was "sorry" about the firing, but "I had no control over that."

49ers Get Draft Choice For Huff

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers today traded linebacker Marty Huff to the Buffalo Bills for an undisclosed future draft choice.

Huff, the team's No. 4 draft choice from Michigan, in 1971, spent his first year on the taxi squad and played in four games during 1972 as a backup middle linebacker.

How To Lead A Buck When Firing

I was having a bull sessions about deer hunting with some of the boys from the Woodacre Fire House gang this week. Bob Taverna and Marty Medin started asking me about the approximate distance to lead a running buck. That's quite a question.

Just off the cuff, I said that a buck running travels about 30 to 40 feet per second. They both immediately figured I was out of my mind. Well, being an occasional horse race handicapper, I knew that the horse races are determined in lengths, and in handicapping a race from the racing form, a horse figures to cover five lengths in one second.

This is for the average race horse. If a horse is ten feet long, then five lengths is about 50 feet. So, a horse runs 50 feet per second. In one tenth of a second, a horse travels approximately five feet.

If the average speed of a buck is about 30 to 40 miles per hours, then a buck runs one-half mile in one minute if we use the 30 mile per hour figure. One half mile equals 1,760 feet. Then dividing 1,760 by 60 seconds, we get approximately 30 feet per second. In a 10th of a second, then, the buck travels three feet or so.

If your gun shoots about 3,000 feet per second, then in one-tenth of a second the bullet travels 300 feet, or 100 yards.

So a running buck at 100 yards should be lead by three to four feet; if you swing with the buck, you should be right on.

At 200 yards, if you swing with the buck, your lead should be three to four feet. If you don't swing, you'll have to lead six to eight feet. At 300 yards, if you swing, you still need a six to eight foot lead, and a nine to 12 foot lead if you don't swing. After that, you probably shouldn't shoot because by then range and trajectory also become major factors.

THE DOVE SEASON opened in Marin County with about 10 limits checked. The opener was a little better than expected for this area. Most of the birds checked were from the Novato areas. One hunter was tagged for hunting without a license.

LOCAL STRIPED BASS fishing was generally good. At the south tower of the Golden Gate Bridge, fishing was tops. Lary Mah of San Rafael took over first place in the "Lord of the Sea Derby" at Loch Lomond with a 29-pound, one-ounce striper. Keith Fraser says, "You now need a fish larger than 19 pounds, one ounce to qualify for just 10th place. Things are getting tougher. The derby ends Sunday at 5 p.m.

TWO BOATS came in with sturgeon Saturday from the area above The Sisters. The fish weighed 54 and 40 pounds. Lot's of sturgeon have been reported jumping in that area. Take lots of bait, you will have some shark and crab problems.

Incidentally, the market crab season is closed. Down at the Paradise Park Pier near Tiburon, some people each week are cited for taking these crabs out of season, and the crabs have been all undersized. The red and rock crabs have no season and no limit on them.

Salmon fishing has been slow. Bob Locke, (my salmon gauge), and four friends took only four salmon Saturday fishing outside.

At California City, probably three or four salmon are being caught each day. It's a hit, and most miss proposition.

Over at Nicasio Lake, the catches have been mostly bluegill. But there always seems to be a crowd there. At Stafford Lake near Novato, a Parks and Recreation man said the cat fishing on some days has been good. Carol Lato of Woodacre made up some of that much publicized catfish bait. She has tried it several places, but nary a catfish. So the other day, she switched to worms and immediately caught a fish. Now she is threatening to mail me the made up bait. They say the smell is so potent, that the catfish just come ashore to get away from the odor. (Carol — just watch the shoreline).

For you trout fishermen, both Phoenix and Lagunitas lakes will be planted this week, probably about the middle of the week.

BOB WILSON took a couple of friends rock fishing outside the Gate some where between Mile Rock and Point Bonita. He had two ling cod — almost 20 pounders — and 31 rock cod when I saw him. He also tells the tale of seeing a buck and a doe just before he came in under "The Bridge" climbing straight up that cliff which is about 100 yards west of the north tower. Next time you go under the gate, take a look, you won't believe it's possible, but if you look closely there's a deer trail from a little green grass patch near the bottom that angles up all the way to the top.

49ers Trade Dunbar To New Orleans

REDWOOD CITY (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers yesterday traded wide receiver Allen (Jubilee) Dunbar to the New Orleans Saints for a future draft choice.

The announcement pared the squad to 48 players. Four other players were cut yesterday to bring the team down to the National Football League's 44-man limit. Their names were not disclosed.

Dunbar, the 49ers' third-round draft choice in 1971, played on the taxi squad last year.

"I'm just happy to say that the Saints think I can help their team," said Dunbar, who was born in New Orleans and now makes his home in Lake Charles, La.

The 49ers' also added halfback Vic Washington to the growing list of injured. Washington, the team's top ground gainer last season, has a cracked knee cap and will miss the regular season opener against Miami on Sept. 16. The club hopes he can return to action the following week against Denver.

Wide receiver Terry Beasley, sidelined with a shoulder dislocation, yesterday did some running with his shoulder taped. But he also will not be ready to play before the Denver game.

"It is very possible that the injury situation could test our depth," said coach Dick Nolan.

Several other players will not be at full strength when the 49ers meet Los Angeles in an exhibition game Friday. Tight end Dick Wicther is suffering from torn stomach muscles, tackle Len Rehde has a broken left hand and linebacker Dave Wilcox a gashed chin.

Halfback Jim Thomas, who came down with a virus infection last week, will resume workouts in a few days but may not be ready for the Miami opener.

Casper's Rise To Fortune

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (upI) — Eighteen years ago Billy Casper barely made travel expenses for his trip to Wethersfield Country Club. Now he practically owns the place.

Casper shot a seven-under-par 64 yesterday to finish with a record 264 while winning his fourth Greater Hartford Open by one stroke over Bruce Devlin.

His performance capped a wild windup day in which seven players were tied at one point for the lead and a brief but violent thunderstorm halted play for 50 minutes and drenched the record gallery of 35,000.

Even the finish was close with Arnold Palmer, defending champion Lee Trevino, Lee Elder and Jim Wiechers tied for third place at 266, two strokes off the pace.

Casper's four-day total of 20 under par on a card of 67-65-68-64 cracked the old GHO record of 266 set in 1966 by Art Wall Jr. and tied in 1968 by Casper himself.

The faultless final round earned Casper $40,000—a far cry from the $338 he took home in his first appearance here in 1955.

"I guess that's enough to get out of town," Casper joked after it was over. "I had a good day, no mistakes. As closely as the field was bunched, all of us watched the scoreboard and knew we couldn't make any mistakes.

"I'm just glad I had a round where I didn't make any mistakes."

Devlin, who finished with a 65-67-67-66, 265, made the road difficult for Casper, putting away a pair of eagles on the back nine to go in front by a stroke.

Devlin holed out with a nine iron from 130 yards on the 10th and sank a 30-foot putt on the 14th.

But Casper stormed back with birdies on the 16th and 17th to wrap it up. He did not miss a green while picking up seven birdies in the round, five of them on the second nine.

Casper felt the rain delay actually helped his game.

"The course played just as I thought it would after the rain," he said. "I figured it would play better because you could throw the ball right at the hole and have it hold."

Casper waited out the storm in a house near the eighth tee.

"Some people invited us in and made us feel right at home with drinks and sandwiches," Casper said. "Maybe we should take a break like that all the time."

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Bonds, Aaron Power Victories

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Bobby Bonds stole the spotlight last night but Hank Aaron could still have the whole show for himself before the season is over.

With a dramatic grand slam homer in the ninth inning of a nationally televised game, Bonds gave the San Francisco Giants an exciting 11-8 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers, who blew a seven-run lead. The loss dropped the Dodgers into a tie for first place with Cincinnati in the National League West.

While Bonds was captivating the national TV audience, Aaron entertained just 8,333 fans in San Diego by hitting the 707th and 708th homers of his career to move within six of Babe Ruth's career record of 714. The homers paced Atlanta to a 7-3 victory over San Diego. And now Aaron has a real chance of cracking the record this season.

Aaron homered in consecutive times at bat in the third and fifth innings. He homered in the third off Clay Kirby and in the fifth off Vicente Romo. That enabled him to tie one of Ruth's lesser known records of 708 homers in one league. Six of Ruth's runs came in the National League.

Aaron has hit two homers in one game five times this year. He's hit five homers in San Diego this year and a total of seven against the Padres.

But Aaron said, "I haven't been too successful on the West Coast, especially in Los Angeles and San Francisco. It takes you a while to get used to the jet lag and by the time you're ready, you have to move out."

Aaron said it's "possible" he still might catch Ruth this year. "I hear Ruth's name every time I turn around. But I still don't think I'm as obsessed with it as everybody else seems to be."

In the other games, Cincinnati beat Houston 4-3, Montreal edged Chicago 5-2, New York blanked Philadelphia 5-0 but lost the second game 6-3 and Pittsburgh beat St. Louis 5-4 in 13 innings before losing the second game 8-3.

In the American League, Baltimore routed Boston 13-8 but lost the second game 9-8, Milwaukee beat Cleveland 13-5 then lost 10-5, Chicago swept Texas 8-7 in 11 innings and 5-2, New York edged Detroit 4-3, Minnesota outlasted Kansas City 11-5 and California nipped Oakland 3-1.

Cincinnati moved into its first place tie with Los Angeles when Ken Griffey hit a two-out, two-run pinch single in the eighth inning to beat Houston. Griffey was just called up on Aug. 25 and Reds' manager Sparky Anderson beamed, "I think he'll be another Lou Brock."

Pittsburgh remained a game behind St. Louis by splitting the doubleheader with the Cards. Brock, Ted Sizemore and Bernie Carbo knocked in two runs each to give St. Louis the second game victory. In the opener, Richie Hebner's 13th inning inside-the-park homer gave the Pirates the triumph.

Jerry Koosman pitched a seven-hitter to hand the Mets the first game victory over the Phils. But the Mets blew a chance to pick up a game on the leaders by losing the second game as Greg Luzinski's homer highlighted a three-run fifth inning.

Steve Renko, who went eight innings, picked up his 12th victory as the Expos downed Chicago to move within three games of first. Renko helped his own cause with a two-run double in the seventh. Mike Marshall got the save but gave up two runs in the ninth.

DO YOU WANT TO KNOW A SECRET? — Boston catcher Carlton Fisk looked like he was whispering in umpire Jerry Neudecker's ear yesterday, but actually he was shouting his anger over a call Neudecker made in the third inning of the first game of the Red Sox' home doubleheader against Baltimore. Neudecker called Oriole Paul Blair safe at home on a three-run, inside-the-park home run. Baltimore won the game, 13-8, but Boston earned a split with a 9-8 triumph in the nightcap. (UPI Telephoto)

Spotlight For Evert, Stan Smith

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) —Without Billie Jean King and without Ilie Nastase — the two 1972 champions — the U.S. Open tennis championships resumed today with Stan Smith America's No. 1 hope in the men's division and Chris Evert squarely on the spot to win her first major title.

Smith, who has dropped only one set in the tournament thus far, was slated to meet Seattle's Tom Gorman, while Miss Evert, by a strange quirk in scheduling, had the day off before her quarter-final clash with Rosie Casals.

For Rosie, yesterday had been a traumatic day. Her great friend Billie Jean had fallen, as much or more to the heat and humidity than to the play of Julie Heldman, while Rosie of Sausalito had waltzed through that same horrendous weather to wipe out Kris Kemmer of Los Angeles, 6-3, 6-4.

For Mrs. King, yesterday was a disaster. She had all but toyed with Miss Heldman in a 6-3 first set, and ran off the first three games of the second set, but then it began to come apart at the seams. Julie won a game. It was 3-1. Billie went to 4-1, and then Julie raced through five straight for the set at 6-4 and opened the third for six straight and a 1-0 lead.

The heat was pressing the defending champion now, but Mrs. King hung in there for that one, last time. The 27-year-old Miss Heldman broke her for a 3-1 edge, and it was Billie's service.

By now, the alarm fires had been lit and as many in the crowd of 11,748 as was humanly possibly jammed their way around the clubhouse court.

Mrs. King was now wandering around the court, not chasing her opponent's returns. She was in a daze, and between points Miss Heldman asked if she were alright.

As they changed sides, Miss Heldman, a stickler for rules, noted that time was passing, and that rules stress only one minute of respite is permitted. She asked the umpire if the time was up. If it was, then, she said, "if she wants to retire she has to now."

Billie, her dreams of adding a fifth Forest Hills title to the five Wimbledon crowns she now holds, gazed through the haze and said: "If you want it that bad, you can have it."

Dr. Daniel Manfredi, the West Side Tennis Club physician, examined Billie and said it was just as well she had retired, for she may have "collapsed" on the court. He said the 29-year-old champion had been taking medication for a virus condition and that could have contributed to her inability to stand the ferocious 96 degree temperature and high humidity.

But it was just as hot for Miss Heldman, of course, and certainly for 38-year-old Ken Rosewall.

Rosewall, the winner here 'way back in 1956 and again in 1970, continued to defy the thermometer and the calendar. He whisked through to his fourth straight-set match to gain the quarter-finals. This time his victim was Cliff Richey, the 16th seed, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3.

Futurity Win May Force Vessels To Alter Views

Combined AP & UPI

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — California quarterhorse breeder Frank Vessels doesn't believe in racing 2-year-old horses. His colt, Timeto Thinkrich, and the world's richest race may be altering his views.

Vessels, the owner of the luxurious Los Alamitos racetrack in southern California, watched his young horse, Timeto Thinkrich, streak to a brilliant one-length victory in yesterdays $1 million All American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs. Vessel's payoff was $424,000 for a race taking just 21 seconds to win.

"I don't like to see 2-year-old racing because they are still too young, they're not fully developed," Vessels said. "But that's where the money is so you have to train them."

Timeto Thinkrich, Vessels' "pet horse," put on a blazing display of speed midway through the 440-yard classic to capture the $330,000 first place purse.

Breaking from the No. 3 post position, Timeto Thinkrich found racing room on the inside and, with jockey John Watson providing the urging, outran Flaming Jet and Coca's Kid to the wire.

"I knew we had it won when we hit the midway point," Watson said. "We got bumped a little at that point and that might have even helped us."

The win came for Watson in his first ride in the rich race and marked the culmination of Vessel's 15-year dream to win the Futurity.

Drag Racing

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Gary Beck of Edmonton, Alberta today is top fuel champion of the U.S. Nationals of the National Hot Rot Association for the second year in a row.

Beck only broke the record here of 6.06 seconds elapsed time with his final run yesterday, but entered the tiny five-second club with a run of 5.6 seconds on his way to the crown.

Beck's money run was 6.04 seconds, 243.90 miles per hour, which defeated runnerup Carl Olson, Torrance, who clocked an E.T. of 6.19 seconds and 225.38 m.p.h. Beck's fastest time was set in an earlier run against Dennis Baca of Walnut Creek.

Baseball

KANSAS CITY — Joe Burke, who resigned Sunday as general manager of the Taxes Rangers, has been named vice president in charge of business for the Kansas City Royals.

Burke replaces Charles Truitt, vice president and treasurer, who announced his retirement.

DETROIT — Detroit Tigers' pitching coach Art Fowler and bullpen coach Charlie Silvera yesterday were fired by general manager Jim Campbell.

MILWAUKEE — Eduardo Rodriguez of Milwaukee yesterday became the first American League pitcher to get a hit this season when he tripled in the eighth inning of the Brewers' 13-5 win over Cleveland in the first game of a doubleheader.

Rodriguez got his chance to bat when Brewer manager Del Crandall removed Dave May and George Scott from the lineup to rest them for the second game and inserted Bobby Mitchell, the original designated hitter, into the lineup in leftfield. Under the rules, the pitcher has to replace the designated hitter in the batting order if the DH plays the field.

Auto Racing

MT. POCONO, Pa. — Brian Redmond yesterday drove his Steed-Lela to victory in winning the Formula 500 Championship race but a third-place finish gave Jody Scheckter the series title.

DU QUOIN, Ill. — Mario Andretti yesterday collected $6,463 in capturing the U.S. Auto Club 100-mile dirt track championship race at the Du Quoin State Fairgrounds.

Jim Davies of Tiburon and the San Francisco Y.C., who crewed for Wosser in past years, ranked third with seven points in the 11-man field. Standings were unofficial beyond that point pending reassessment of points due to breakdowns.

There were three breakdowns in the stiff wind yesterday. Hank Mettier of Belvedere and the San Francisco Y.C. saw his jib downhaul crank burst on the last leg of the race; Ted Cook of Marblehead, Mass., had a top spreader break; and J. Hardy Watlington of the Royal Bermuda Y.C. was reduced to bailing water out of his yacht with a bucket.

despite a population of seven million and a huge influx of tourists.

Besides, she was able to establish contact with people. Russian children would follow American athletes asking for chewing gum, a scarcity in the U.S.S.R., and the Americans would oblige. Cookie also taught a group of Mongolians how to throw the frisbee, which may sound trivial, but is probably what scholars mean when they talk about "cultural exchange at a person-to-person level."

She also made friends among foreign athletes, joining in the frantic equipment-swapping that made the returning U.S. team look like participants in a United Nations parade. She traded her U.S. windbreaker for a Polish sweat suit.

Cookie will return to the University of California at Davis this fall to begin her sophomore year. She will continue collegiate swimming (she was named the school's woman athlete of the year last term) but may "hang up my suit" in Amateur Athletic Union competition, since she is already "the old lady of the Petaluma Swim Club."

She may still be swimming at Davis when the next University games come around, but if they're in Moscow, don't expect her to be on the team.

Coaches Juggling Act In Full Bloom

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The great National Football League Coaches juggling act is in full bloom today.

Yesterday was the next-to-last cutdown for NFL clubs, with rosters pared to 44 players, including members of the College All Star team, who didn't count previously. But in a sense, Monday's cuts were the most important of the training camp for coaches since they are the last cuts which can be recalled.

Players dropped next Monday when teams must meet the regular-season limit of 40 men cannot be recalled if claimed by another club.

The common practice now is for coaches to cut under the limit, recall any worthwhile player claimed, and offer him to the claiming club in a trade.

It's also the time of year the coaches of the weaker clubs wait for. Waiver claims are made in reverse order of last year's standings and the havenots get first crack at players dropped by the top clubs.

In moves made yesterday, Pittsburgh traded Ralph "Sticks" Anderson, their starting free safety, to New England for a draft choice. The trade of Anderson, a 6-foot-1, 180- pounder, opens up a starting berth for Glen Edwards.

The Steelers also announced that running back Franco Harris and defensive tackle Tom Keating may miss the final preseason game against Atlanta this weekend with knee injuries.

Buffalo sent Mike Stratton, a 12-year veteran linebacker, to San Diego for a draft choice and then obtained rookie quarterback Randy Mattingly on waivers from Chicago.

Philadelphia dropped Billy Walik, a four-year veteran kick return specialist, defensive back Pat Gibbs, offensive tackle Richard Stevens and four rookies. Guard Roy Kirksey, obtained from the New York Jets last week, failed the Eagles' physical.

The Green Bay Packers said that quarterback Jim Del Gaizo, acquired from Miami just two weeks ago, will miss at least two games with broken ribs. Del Gaizo, who cost the Packers a pair of No. 2 picks, was kayoed by the Steeler defense in a loss to Pittsburgh Saturday night.

Peacock Gap Golf Course Will Get Facelift From New Owners

Peacock Gap Golf and Country Club in San Rafael will get a general face-lifting both inside and out within the next month and a half, according to the Japanese firm which bought the 150-acre facility Friday.

The new owners will retain the same employees and procedures but hope to upgrade services with more attention to personal needs of club members and guests.

Masanori Sasaki, resident manager of the club, said he plans a general renovation and repainting, plus re-carpeting of the clubhouse interior and improvements in exterior maintenance and landscaping. The renovation will be completed in mid-Ocotber.

Sasaki and other high officials of Nitto Kogyo Ltd. of Tokyo visited with Independent-Journal publisher Wishard A. Brown Friday to discuss their plans and exchange ideas on how Peacock Gap can better serve the community.

From the tone of the conversation, we can look forward to marked improvement in personal services and conveniences offered at Peacock Gap.

CONCRETE WATERPROOFING of California Inc., a new company that sells a product to waterproof all types of concrete from swimming pools to high-rises, has opened at 54 Mark Drive, suites 2 and 6, in Northgate Industrial Park.

The firm is headed by William A. Case of Petaluma, who was manager of the Associated General Contractors of Northern California for the past four years.

Case sells a product called Xypex, developed six years ago in Canada, which he describes as unique "because it works where other concrete waterproofing materials have failed."

Case said Xypex has been used by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, successfully tested on underground sewage systems, and will be tried on the BART tube. It can also be used on pools, retaining walls, decks, sidewalks, ferro-cement boats, tunnels and dams — anywhere there is a leakage problem.

Xypex is a coating that permeates concrete and fills it with soft crystal structures that allow concrete to "breathe" but stops all water. Case said the product stands up under freeze, thaw, contraction and expansion and is marketed worldwide.

William Hoey Company negotiated the lease of space for Concrete Waterproofing of California. Hoey also arranged leases for Poor Ann's Press, Sunnyside Enterprises, Decorator's Warehouse, and Western Shower Door Inc.

POOR ANN'S PRESS, a new firm that provides quick printing and copying services, opened at 45 Mitchell Boulevard, suite 8, Northgate Industrial Park.

It is owned by Nancy J. Bischof of Sausalito, who worked for Addressograph and Multigraph Co. for the past seven years. Poor Ann's Press is open five days a week from 8:30 a.m. to 5:15 p.m.

Stocks Continue Rally In Stepped-Up Trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — A newfound optimism, stemming from the market's recent ability to ignore potentially damaging news developments, helped stocks to further broad gains today in stepped-up trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts had few ready explanations for the market's current rally, now in its eighth day. While some pointed to the dollar's recent gains, others said the list simply was oversold, and long due for a rebound after many months of declines.

Observers said Wall Street coped with the last two rises in the prime lending rate with little commotion, amid a feeling many interest rates may be nearing their peaks after months of increases.

Leading Big Board actives, Ramada Inns rose ⅛ to 10¼ on 78,900 shares.

On the American Stock Exchange, prices moved broadly ahead in light trading. Combustion Equipment Associates led the actives, up ⅞ at 24 on 20,600 shares.

Stocks on the Big Board of oil companies affected by the Libyan government's takeover announcement last Saturday lost heavily.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Yield On Bonds Is Confusing

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I bought Federal Land Bank bonds which paid 7½ per cent. Then I noticed in your column you say they are paying 8.4 per cent. When I called my agent he said they now pay 9 per cent. What is wrong?

A. There is a very reasonable explanation for this seeming conflict. When bonds are bought at original offering for $1,000, the coupon or interest rate is the same as the yield. For example: a 7.5 per cent bond bought at $1,000 yields 7.5 per cent, but if the price of that bonds goes down in the resale market to $950, the bond is then said to pay 7.9 per cent currently. This is the yield that a buyer at $950 would receive. When you checked with your broker he quoted you the highest current yield available on Federal Land Bank bonds. Your particular issue, which is due in July, 1980, is selling at about $982 to yield 7.64 per cent currently or 7.69 per cent when held to maturity.

Q. I am a 69-year-old widow caught in the vise of rising costs and an inadequate fixed income of $5,250 annually. I hold two preferred stocks, receive Social Security allotments and have $6,000 in a 5¼ per cent savings account. How may my income be increased, keeing in mind the primary requisite of safety? — T.Y.

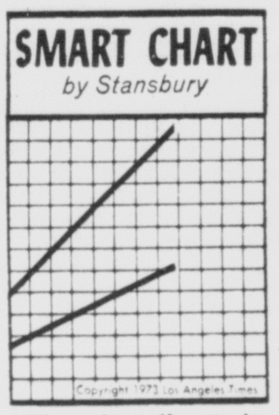

A. Your problem has no ready solution since your investments, which total $35,500 including savings, yield 7.6 per cent on average. I would certainly suggest that you investigate some of the higher-interest term accounts for part of your savings. However, at best this will only increase your return by less than $100 annually if you transfer half your account. The American Telephone preferred (NYSE) shares which you hold should be sold since the current yield is only 7.2 per cent.

As a replacement, $18,000 of Continental Telephone Corp. 9-5/8s of 1975 would add about $400 to your annual income. This short-term bond is trading slightly above par, is non-callable and carries a BBB rating. These two changes will increase your annual income $500, about 10 per cent more than at present.

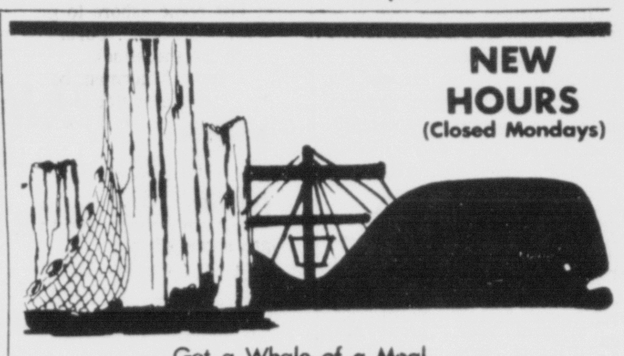

Tips Are Given To New Businesses

DETROIT (UPI) — More than 1,500 new businesses are launched every business day across the United States. And about half of them go broke within 18 months because the wrong people try to sell the wrong product or service to the wrong market at the wrong time.

So says the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce in a new book intended to help would-be businessmen in the Detroit area avoid the most common causes of business failure.

"The prime-rib rate is a greater threat than the prime rate."

Farm Price Rise To Be Passed On

By HARRY B. ELLIS
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Now it is clear why Treasury Secretary George P. Schultz, with a furtive glance at the onrushing August wholesale price index, warned that "astounding" price increases were on the way.

Schultz had in mind raw farm products, whose average prices, the Agriculture Department now says, rose an astonishing 20 per cent in the month ended Aug. 15.

Farm products form only part of the wholesale price index, which will be released Friday. But most other things are costing more, too, so the American consumer is due for bad news.

Separately, the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization forsees so dire a shortage of wheat next year that its director general, Dr. A. H. Boerma, is calling for an urgent international meeting in Rome Sept. 20.

Doerma says world wheat stocks are at a 20-year low and that wheat available for export this year may fall nine million tons below demand.

He urges the United States, Canada, France, Argentina, and Australia the major wheat exporting nations — to send cabinet ministers to the Rome meeting to discuss, among other things, creation of a world food bank.

American families face higher food bills. Millions of Asians, Latin Americans, and Africans confront malnutrition, in some cases starvation, if some way is not found out to share world grain crops more equitably.

U.S. wheat stocks, the world's most important granary, now stand at 11.6 million tons, according to the Department of Agriculture, and may drop to eight million tons next year. A safe level is 16 million tons.

Already, says the Agriculture Department, foreign buyers have contracted to buy 1.173 billion bushels of the 1974 U.S. wheat crop, which is estimated at 1.7 billion bushels.

More than 300 million bushels of that export wheat, experts note, is consigned to "unidentified destination," which means some of it might end up back on the U.S. domestic market.

Nonetheless, with U.S. home consumption put at 815 million bushels, American wheat farmers will be hard pressed to meet home and foreign demand — even if wheat crops are excellent in other parts of the world.

In this confused situation, American farmers are reaping a bonanza. In August, for the first time in 21 years, farmers income rose 100 per cent above parity. The mid-August figure was 102.

The parity formula computes prices received by farmers for their crops and livestock, the prices they must pay for goods and services, and concludes that 100 percent is "Fair."

In July, the ratio was 88. From the standpoint of U.S. farmers, they are only now after many years below parity, receiving a fair return on their work, compared to what they must pay for their supplies, labor, and other costs.

Uncontrolled from Phase 1 through 4 of President Nixon's "new economic policy," farmers are free to get for their crops whatever prices the market will bear.

Processors, wholesalers, and retail grocerymen then may pass on to the consumer whatever portion of higher prices they think consumers will pay.
